Emergency Bills For Correcting Prison Situation

Governor Recommends Outdoor Camps, to Accommodate 500, Increase in Food Allowance and 81 More Guards.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 2 (AP).—A special message, discussing a situation credited with responsibility for recent inmate outbreaks in two of the state prisons, was sent to the legislature today by Governor Roosevelt.

The governor's message followed by a day introduction of measures by Senator Caleb H. Baumes, Republican chairman of the state crime commission, calling for the expenditure of $10,000,000 for 1,300 additional cells in the prison system; for a full-time parole board of three members to operate independently of the commission of correction and for an increased allowance for the convicts' food. The governor previously had said his message and bills of today would be but an initial phase of an extensive prison program.

"The truth," said the governor in discussing the general causes for the breaks, "is that our prison system is antiquated and that even in our penal laws we are still in the experimental stage."

The governor declared overcrowding to be one of the major factors in the existing prison situation.

"It is impossible to build new permanent buildings overnight," the governor told the Legislature, "and therefore, in order to relieve present conditions, I am asking you to authorize the Department of Corrections to establish cantonments or outdoor camps which can be built in a month's time and which will accommodate approximately five hundred men.

"It is proposed that one of these camps be placed at the new Attica prison and that a part of the grading and other work in connection with the building of the prison be accomplished by this means. Other camps would be used for the purpose of carrying on certain highway construction which can be accomplished during the winter as well as the summer season. It has been suggested that one camp be placed in the forest preserve and that work be done in cutting necessary fire breaks.

"These camps are, frankly, an experiment; but if successful the system can be made permanent and serve for all time to relieve congestion in the prisons themselves, to afford healthful outdoor exercise for the prisoners and to carry on necessary public works.

"The sum desired for the establishment of these cantonments is $355,000."

Increase of the present allowance of 25 cents a day a prisoner for food to 30 cents and an additional clothing allowance was recommended.

"During the recent riots," the message said, "the conduct of the prison guards was excellent, but I am convinced that we need immediately an additional force of guards. I am therefore asking for the authorization of the employment of 81 more guards at the various institutions. Furthermore, I believe that the scale of pay of the prison guards is at the present time too low and I am recommending moderate increases."

Reading of the message precipitated controversy in both houses.

Assemblyman Eberly Hutchinson, Republican, Fulton-Hamilton, after being told that no appropriation bills accompanied the message today, declared:

"We are eager to do anything we can, but our staying here cannot relieve the dead guards at Auburn prison. If the administration of the prison is responsible for the riots, it is responsible for the dead guards.

"I don't think it is true, as said in the Governor's message of yesterday, that over-economy of the Legislature is responsible. The cell blocks at Auburn are antiquated. However, in 1927 Sullivan Jones, then state architect, stated that if the Legislature in the ensuing session would give the money he could have a cell block ready in one year. The records will show that the Legislature appropriated $900,000 that session but the cell block was not built. In fact it wasn't until this summer that a cell block contract finally was let.

"I think that the bills deserve a brief but thorough scrutiny."

In the upper House, Senator John Knight, majority leader, also absolved the Legislature of responsibility.

"We doubt," said Senator Knight, "that the public realizes that at the time of the recent outbreak at Auburn prison more than 300 convicts were sleeping in the corridors and wherever six feet of room could be found for them, while 600 cells, larger than those at Auburn and more recently constructed, were vacant at Sing Sing.

"Nor does the public know that nearly two years have elapsed since provision was made for the new cell block at Auburn prison and that construction has not started yet.

"Last year the department of correction and the Governor failed to get in the executive budget a request for nearly $1,000,000 that the finance chairman and the Republican leaders thought necessary for prison construction and the million was added to the appropriation bill on our initiative. But it was the business of the executive to determine what was needed for prison construction, not of the Legislature."

Shake Hands With 6,348 on New Years Day

Washington, Jan. 2 (AP).—The great and the lowly extended personal New Year greetings to President and Mrs. Hoover yesterday. The Chief Executive and First Lady shook hands with 6,348 persons.

From 11 o'clock until nearly 3, with the exception of a short period for lunch, and brief intervals of rest while the long line was halted, Mr. and Mrs. Hoover were busy receiving the best wishes of their callers.

First came the diplomatic corps and the cabinet, then the members of the supreme court. They were followed by officials of the judiciary branch of the government and ranking officers of the army and navy.

Meanwhile, a line of more humble citizens, two blocks long, was forming for the reception to the public in the afternoon. This began at 1 o'clock and continued for nearly two hours. Occasionally the line was stopped and Mr. and Mrs. Hoover sat down for a moment's rest. For the first time in many years, Chief Justice Taft was not present. The death of a half brother in Cincinnati prevented.

Only once since 1904 has the number attending the New Year's Day reception exceeded that of yesterday. That was in 1921.

Will Be Notable Week in Rome

Week of Crown Prince's Marriage Expected to Excel Any Experienced in Over a Century.

Rome, Jan. 2 (AP).—With a royal wedding set for January 8, a new state of things in the social world inaugurated by the breaking down of the old barrier between the "Black" and "White" aristocracies, and the splendor of the fetes attendant on Pope Pius's golden jubilee of priesthood, Rome is looking forward to a post-holiday week "brighter and better" than any the city has experienced for more than a century.

All the women-folk of the diplomatic set and those who are admitted at court have made sizeable purchases of toilettes in anticipation of the social functions that will lead up the Crown Prince's marriage to Princess Marie Jose of Belgium.

Foreign diplomats, highly placed government functionaries and members of both the Papal and Italian aristocracies have been replenishing their wardrobes. New full dress uniforms have been ordered by the army, navy and aviation officers destined to attend the regal wedding ceremony and others leading up to it.

Despite Mussolini's campaign in favor of made-in-Italy raiment, it is an open secret that Paris dressmakers and London tailors and haberdashers have had quite a bit more than their share of the diplomatic and aristocratic trade.

Roman tailors, however, have nothing to complain of, thanks to the boom given their handiwork by a report that the Prince of Wales this year will have some Italian models among his sartorial accoutrements.

Licenses Revoked And Suspended

Five residents of this vicinity were among the 733 who had their licenses to drive and certificates of automobile registration revoked or suspended during the three weeks ended December 21.

The revocations were Wayman F. Cody, Glasco; Frederick Hafer, 87 Grand street, Kingston; Earl Varney, Kerhonkson, all for driving while intoxicated; and Irving Rothberg of Kerhonkson for reckless driving.

There was one suspension. Christ Lay of 8 Smith avenue had his license suspended for improper use of plates.

In the entire Albany district, which includes Ulster county, there were 43 revocations and 45 suspensions. Eight of the revocations were for failure to file omnibus bonds, the names of those involved not being published.

There were 284 revocations and 167 suspensions in the city of New York and vicinity. In other parts of the state there were 148 revocations and 131 suspensions.

$3,500 FOR ORDINARY PLATE DINNER

Kansas City, Jan. 2 (AP).—An ordinary plate dinner of the kind served at church affairs sold here last night for $3,500. The dinner was held in the Linwood Christian Church to raise funds to pay off the church debt and diners were permitted to pay any multiple of $50 for their meal. The pastor said $100,000 was paid by the diners.

De Rivera Has Not Resigned.

Madrid, Jan. 2 (AP).—General Primo De Rivera, Spanish premier-dictator, was said today in circles close to King Alfonso not to have resigned. The King was said to have expressed confidence in him with reference to the political transformation now contemplated. Official sanction of his government was expected within a few days, it was indicated. The informants added that alarming rumors here and abroad were based on misinformation.

Asks $145,638 For Additional Bank Examiners

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 2 (AP).—Governor Roosevelt today asked the legislature for an appropriation of $145,683 which would be used to cover the cost during the first six months of the present year of employment of additional bank examiners.

The increased inspection force was recommended to the Governor following an investigation of the State Banking Department by Former Secretary of State Robert Moses, an investigation prompted by the collapse of the City Trust Company of New York and the conviction of former Superintendent of Banks Frank H. Warder.

The proposal for the enlarged inspecting force, the Governor said, was made to him by a special committee of bankers and business men who had been investigating the administration of the banking law independently of a legislative committee created for that purpose.

The request to the legislature came in the form of a special message. A special legislative day was called to allow for introduction of the bills and receipt of the message.

The Governor also submitted an appropriation bill for $100,000 to cover counsel fees in a controversy between this state and New Jersey arising from a treaty between the states for development of the port of New York.

"I regret to report," the Governor said, "that certain steps have been taken in our sister state of New Jersey which are highly detrimental to the proper development of the port of New York. These steps seem to be violative of the spirit of the treaty entered into between New York and New Jersey and approved by Congress. . . . New Jersey has appropriated large sums of money with which to employ prominent counsel and to conduct extensive litigation. I regret that it therefore becomes necessary immediately to secure the benefit of eminent and distinguished counsel to represent the State of New York in these disputes."

The message requesting additional appropriations for the State Banking Department brought sharp replies from the majority party of the Legislature.

In the Senate, the majority leader, John Knight, declared it had taken "two disastrous bank failures in New York city to teach the State Banking Department under a Democratic administration that a considerable addition to the examining force was necessary. Last year six and only six new examiners were requested and six were allowed. Now they discover that what was actually needed was something like fifty additional examiners."

In the lower house, Assemblyman Eberly Hutchinson, Republican, of Fulton-Hamilton, charged that "actual criminal collusion by executive appointees is the sole trouble with the banking situation."

Discussing the message, the assemblyman said:

"Everyone desires to do all they can, but it seems unfortunate that the executive office is conducted at times as an advertising bureau for political campaigns."

AND NOW THE COMMUNISTS HAVE NO USE FOR HIM

New York, Jan. 2 (AP).—From Roger Baldwin the New York Times has obtained information Dr. Scott Nearing, whose radical views cost him professorships in the University of Pennsylvania and Toledo University, has been expelled from the Communist party.

He also has resigned from the board of directors of the Civil Liberties Union and the board of trustees of the Garland Fund.

Baldwin, a member of both boards, said Dr. Nearing had resigned.

In his letter resigning from the Garland Fund, which gives financial support to liberal and radical organizations, Dr. Nearing explained he planned to devote his time to research, writing and speaking.

Possible reasons for his expulsion from the Communist party were seen in the fact that while on the board of the Garland Fund he had voted to give aid to the conference for Progressive Labor Action, an organization opposed by the Communists, and had written a thesis on imperialism which was said by Communist leaders to deviate from the line of their tenets.

Dr. Nearings friends say that in recent years he has adopted an extremely simple mode of life, wearing coarse cloths, eating only the simplest foods and shunning all refinements of modern living.

Dissolves Marriage.

An order has been issued by Supreme Court Justice McNamee dissolving the marriage of Lillian Covey to Philip Sherman Covey. The parties were married on March 5, 1921. Defendant left Kingston in August, 1924, and plaintiff has been unable by diligent search to ascertain whether defendant is dead or alive. Notice of action was made by newspaper publications by plaintiff. Andrew J. Cook, attorney for petitioner.

Move for "Puran Swaraj" In India To Start at Once

Lahore, India, Jan. 2 (AP).—The new working committee of the India National Congress today decided to authorize the president of the congress to call upon all native congressmen in the various legislatures to resign immediately. The action will be the first step in the move to gain independence for India through non-cooperation with the British governmental machinery.

The committee also fixed January 26 as the date for a nation-wide demonstration in support of the new creed of the congress, which was defined as "Puran Swaraj" or "Complete Swaraj" or "Complete Independence".

A small deputation of the working committee considered it desirable to wait before giving such definite shape to the policy of civil disobedience, so as to see whether any future repressive action of the government could be made an issue for civil disobedience on an individual or mass scale.

Chambermaids Are in Revolt

Receive $12 to $16 a Month in Paris —In Towns or Country $10 or Less.

Paris, Jan. 2 (AP).—Russian "femmes de menage"—or, in English, chambermaids—are in revolt.

Repairing yesterday by the hundreds from apartments great and small to the left bank of the Seine they drew up a bill of rights for presentation to the households they serve.

It reads:

"We, the Union of the Femme De Menage of Paris, have the honor to announce to you our ultimate and unalterable decisions, taken in general assembly.

"From now on we must have a fixed wage, not depending on the whim and humor of our employers. The tip, being a varying amount depending on change, should be fixed.

"From January 1, we refuse to polish as well as to climb up ladders for the purpose of shining windowpanes and keeping them in condition.

"We further ask a respite for fifteen minutes each morning, no deduction to be made from wages in consequence.

"We ask for double pay Sundays and holidays and not to have pay arbitrarily deducted for uniforms.

"After big dinners and receptions we ask for a supplementary sum for polishing the glasses and shining the silver."

The regular wage of these maids of all work in Paris is twelve to sixteen dollars a month. In the provincial towns, it is ten dollars a month and in the country less.

Except in Paris, their wages are never fixed. It is not unusual in the provinces for the workday to begin at half past five in the morning and to last to nine, ten and eleven at night.

Gives Yacht to Government

Washington, Jan. 2 (AP).—J. P. Morgan has presented his palatial private yacht, The Corsair, to the government for the use of the Coast and Geodetic Survey in making studies of the continental shelf extending beyond the Atlantic and gulf coast lines.

Arrangements were made to complete the transfer with simple formalities today at Tebo's Basin, in Brooklyn, with Captain F. L. Peacock taking command for the Coast and Geodetic Survey. The ceremonies included changing the name of the vessel to the Oceanographer.

The work in which the yacht will be used consists of recharting the entire Atlantic and gulf seaboards. One vessel, The Lydonia, already is engaged in this task and a second, The Hydrographer, recently launched at Norfolk, also is to take part in the work.

The only stipulation attached to the present gift is that it never shall be disposed of by the government except by scrapping.

The vessel is of 1,136 gross tons, has a length of 270 feet and a beam of 38.3 feet. It is said to be in excellent condition.

WASHINGTON SOCIAL RIFT BRIDGED NEW YEAR'S DAY.

Washington, Jan. 2 (AP).—The social rift that has Mrs. Dolly Curtis Gann, the sister of the vice president, on one side of it and Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth, the wife of the speaker of the House of Representatives, on the other, was bridged yesterday at the New Year's day White House reception.

Mrs. Gann and her brother and Mr. and Mrs. Longworth extended their greetings to the President and just a little later the two ladies were discovered in an animated and friendly conversation.

Washington is wondering whether a truce has been declared in the social feud, which arose from the question of whether the official hostess of the vice president or the wife of the speaker of the House be given precedence at state functions.

Fatal Bomb Lay For Two Days In Neighbor's Home

Infernal Machine That Killed Young Bride and Injured Eight Others, May Have Been Sent By Rejected Suitor of Dead Woman.

Seat Pleasant, Md., Jan. 2 (AP).—A deadly bomb in the guy guise of a belated Christmas gift brought swift death to a young wife and severe injuries to a group of relatives who had gathered for a family New Year party. There were but scant clues for the guidance of the police, searching today for some trace of the sender.

The dead woman was Mrs. Naomi Hall Brady, 18, married last June to Herman Brady, 22, a farmer of Mitchellville. The injured numbered eight and included the girl's mother, Mrs. John Hall, who is expected to recover; her grandmother, six brothers and sisters, three of whom are in a serious condition, and the son of a neighbor, whose hurts were slight.

The tragedy took place shortly after breakfast yesterday. The package was delivered to the Hall home by Leslie Hall, who is in a serious condition, and by the neighbor's son. Mrs. Brady eagerly tore off the Yuletide wrappings while members of the family clustered closely about her. Suddenly there was an explosion. Mrs. Brady died twenty minutes after being received at a Washington hospital.

Neighbors who heard the explosion came quickly to the scene. The injured were rushed to hospitals in Washington, a few miles away.

Neither the dead woman's husband nor her father was present at the time. The husband was searching for a house in which they might start housekeeping, while the father was at work in a cemetery some distance away.

The sinister package was delivered by error on Sunday at the home of a neighbor, Mrs. John Buckley, who found it on her porch. She was unable to determine at once the identity of Mrs. Brady, to whom it was addressed, but yesterday she learned where the woman might be found and when young Leslie and his friend passed the house she gave it to them to deliver. For two days it had reposed in her home, with her children playing in the same room.

The bomb was believed to have contained dynamite, about which had been packed nails and pieces of metal. Bits of the wrapping paper were found in the wreckage of the Hall home, which was badly damaged, but these, the police said, were of little assistance in running down the responsible person.

The Washington Post said today the police intend questioning a rejected suitor of Mrs. Brady. His name was not given, but he was described as a man in middle life, an individual of highly inflammable temper, and known to be familiar with dynamite.

MORE BOMBINGS DESPITE THREAT OF DEATH PENALTY

New Orleans, Jan. 2 (AP).—In the latest violence attendant on the six months old street car strike here two trolleys were bombed last night. The second blast occurred in a distant section of the city while authorities were investigating the first in the downtown district.

The bombing followed the dynamiting of one car Tuesday night despite the fact that police have announced they would arrest suspects under an old state law providing the death penalty for such violence. Bombings have been frequent.

Two women passengers fainted when the first car encountered a charge of dynamite laid on the tracks near the edge of the city's business district. The ten passengers were unhurt. Floor boards in the front of the car were torn up.

Hardly had police and government marshals begun an investigation than the second street car was bombed in similar fashion in another section. Four passengers on the second car escaped injury.

COMMUNISTS GIVE RUBIO HOSTILE RECEPTION

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 2 (AP).—After a reception marked by a hostile demonstration on the part of 200 or more men and women who mingled with a friendly crowd at the railroad station, Pascual Ortiz Rubio, president-elect of Mexico, today was scheduled to receive the official greetings of the city of Detroit at City Hall.

The president-elect appeared unperturbed by the unfriendly attitude of the noisy group which was outnumbered ten to one by those who cheered as he left his train at the Michigan Central station last night. The hostile crowd was said by police to have been made up principally of local Communists. Two men were detained by police. They gave their names as Philip Ramone, 30, and Lawrence Gosman, 16.

New Convent Building To Be Dedicated Sunday

House of the Holy Guardian Angels for Children at the Convent of St. Anne Will be Dedicated by Bishop Shipman.

The Right Rev. Herbert Shipman, Suffragan-Bishop of New York, acting for the Right Rev. William T. Manning, Bishop of New York, will bless and dedicate the recently completed House of the Holy Guardian Angels for Children at the Convent of St. Anne, 287 Broadway, Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

The new building is built in the Dutch Colonial style, consistent with the historical atmosphere of Kingston, of red brick, native stone, green shingles with cream trim. It is in size 64 by 38 feet, a part of it three stories in height, the rest two stories. It consists of a large and attractive entrance hall, reception room, the Chapel of the Holy Child, an infirmary, four dormitories, four cells for Sisters, a nursery and nursery playroom, and a large playroom, five baths and three lavatories, and numerous closets. In one corner of the building, with separate entrance, is a chaplain's lodge consisting of study, bedroom and bath. The playroom is so situated that it has windows on three sides and is 36 by 49 feet in size. It contains a large fireplace, lavatories, coat closets, a locker for each child's toys, large closet for outdoor toys, and is furnished with tables, chairs and other furniture suitable for children. A large library of children's books stretches across one end of the room. Admiral Francis Higginson has equipped it with indoor gymnasium apparatus. The building is perfectly arranged for children, is modern in every respect, heated by oil burner, and with full fire protection. The Rev. Gregory Mabry designed the building, Henry W. Meyer drew the plans, E. O. Van Aken was the masonry contractor, A. W. Van Gaasbeek was carpentry contractor, Roswell Coles was the electrician, Joseph F. Deegan installed the plumbing and heating system, and Henry G. Macholdt had the contract for the painting.

The new building stands to one side, in the rear of the convent proper. The property formerly belonged to the Alva S. Staples Estate. It is perfectly arranged and equipped for its purpose, and is a real addition to Kingston architecture.

On November 20, four years ago, three Sisters of the Order of St. Anne, a religious order for women in the Episcopal Church, came to Kingston on the invitation of the Rev. Gregory Mabry to found a convent, retreat house, and work for children. For a few months they occupied a rented property on Downs street, later taking the Staples property. They immediately enlarged it by raising the roof and making 10 more rooms, thus forming an enclosure for the Sisters from the rest of the house. Children were accommodated in one portion and guests in another. With the occupation of the new building the original one will be used entirely as a convent, which will be used for the Sisters and retreatants. Private retreats are arranged and retreats for groups are given at stated intervals. The Kingston convent is an autonomous house of the Order of St. Anne, with its own novitiate. It has attracted a number of vocations, and has had professions until the Sisters now number eight.

The grounds in which the buildings stand are spacious, with splendid old trees and fine gardens. It is situated on Broadway at the intersection of Delaware avenue. The Rev. Gregory Mabry, rector of Holy Cross Parish, Kingston, is warden; the Rev. J. G. H. Barry is resident priest and lecturer; the Rev. R. S. Hornby is chaplain, and the Rev. Mother Audrey, O. S. A., is the mother superior.

William J. Clark of Craftsbury, Vt., has been employed as assistant manager of the Ulster County Farm Bureau. During the summer season Mr. Clark will take care of the Spray Information Service.

While Mr. Clark managed the Vincent orchards he became familiar with the extension service through A. B. Buckholz, manager of the Columbia County Farm Bureau. Extension work in New York state appealed to him and he applied for a position. During the past month he assisted Mr. Buckholz in Columbia county. He assumed his duties in Ulster county today.

With an assistant the Farm Bureau is again in a position to offer greater service to its members.

DETROIT POLICE INSPECTOR SHOT FOUR TIMES

Detroit, Jan. 2 (AP).—Inspector Henry J. Garvan, head of the crime and bomb squad of the Detroit Police Department, was shot four times and seriously wounded shortly after 8 a. m. today by a group of men in a large black sedan who drove beside the inspector's car on Coplin avenue near Jefferson avenue and fired 12 shots.

An 11-year-old girl, struck four times by bullets, was said to be dying.

The inspector is known to have been a marked man in the city's underworld since the organization of the crime and bomb squad two years ago. The squad was organized to rid the city of racketeers and hijackers.

The wounded girl is Lois Bartlett. She was hit twice in the arm, once in the head and the back. Receiving hospital attaches reported her to be dying.

Inspector Garvin's condition was said to be serious but not critical. He was able to give police details of the shooting.

San Francisco, Jan. 2 (AP).—California has produced, for the first time in its history, a billion dollar bank—The Bank of Italy. Publication of the bank's annual statement today revealed assets of $1,055,000,000, showing a gain in 1929 of $200,000,000.

The Bank of Italy thus becomes the fourth bank in the United States to enter the billion dollar class, and the first one west of the Mississippi river. The others are the National City Bank of New York, the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, and the Continental Illinois Bank of Chicago.

The bank's greatest gain during the year just ended was in deposits, which increased from $698,043,000 to $893,892,000. The gain was more than $195,000,000.

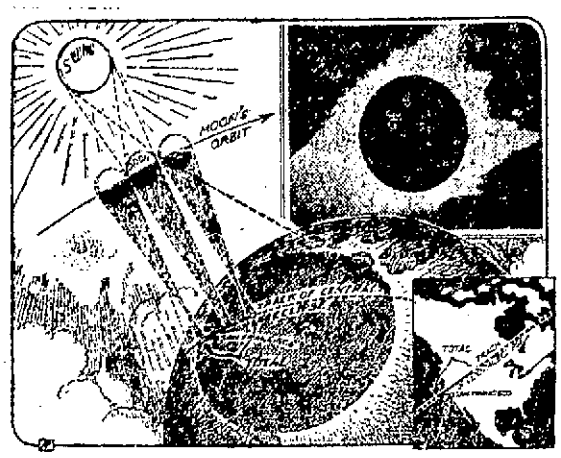
PRINCE OF WALES TO MAKE AFRICAN TRIP

London, Jan. 2 (AP).—The Prince of Wales was back in London today after having spent the holidays with his parents at Sandringham, to make final preparations for beginning of his African trip and to say good-bye to friends.

He will leave tomorrow for Southampton aboard the steamer Kenilworth Castle to resume the tour which was interrupted last year by the illness of King George. He will first go to Capetown. He will return to England probably in April. The Prince expects to do considerable hunting while away.

Sun Eclipse In April



There will be an eclipse of the sun next April 28. The diagrams show its track, the comparatively short line of totality and the great area of shadow. The photograph is of the total eclipse of 1923, with the black disk of the sun surrounded by the corona.

By ROBERT H. BAKER
(Professor of Astronomy, University of Illinois)

Urbana, Ill., (AP).—An eclipse of the sun of an unusual type will occur April 28, 1930.

The moon's shadow will strike near San Francisco about 11 a. m. Moving swiftly toward the northeast, the shadow will rise above the earth in southern Montana half an hour later.

The penumbra of the shadow will overspread all of North America in the greater part of the United States half or more of the sun will be hidden.

Total eclipse will be viewed only along the narrow track between California and Montana, lasting nowhere longer than a second and a half.

Astronomers call this type a central eclipse. Along the central track which runs on through Canada and across Hudson Bay the moon will pass centrally before the sun, but it will not quite cover it.

The moon will be partly eclipsed April 12, the eclipse beginning a little before midnight, eastern time, and lasting about an hour. Two other eclipses in 1930 will not be seen in our hemisphere.

Venus, now the morning star, will cross behind the sun February 6. From March to November it will be in the west after sunset.

Near the end of April Mercury will be seen in the west at nightfall not far from the little cluster of the Pleiades.

Mars will rise after midnight until October. Near the end of the year it will be visible in the evening as one of the brightest stars. But it will not be at its best again until 1939.

Jupiter will be the most conspicuous planet early in the year, continuing in the evening sky until June. Saturn and its rings are reserved for the summer and autumn. The rings are now open as wide as they ever appear to us.

Astronomers are making preparations for the visit, near the end of the year, of the tiny planet Eros. About once in a generation it comes nearer the earth than any other planet ever approaches. It can come within 14,000,000 miles of the earth. The closest approach this time will occur early in 1931.

SHOKAN.

Shokan, Jan. 2.—Miss Edith Nankavil of New York city is the guest of Mrs. Denis T. Lynch at the latter's home in the Coons neighborhood. Miss Nankavil, whose exhibit of etchings at Woodstock last summer attracted much favorable criticism among members of the artists' colony, finds Shokan and the winter scenery here greatly to her liking.

An enjoyable social affair of Saturday evening, December 28, was the surprise party tendered Mrs. Catherine Personeus by a number of that lady's friends. Games and dancing formed a part of the evening's pleasures and there was a feast of good things to eat. Guests at the party included: George Lounsberry and family of Kripplebush, Floyd and Leah Barringer of Samsonville, Mr. and Mrs. Sylvester Wells, Joseph Constable and family, Herbert, George, and John Craver of Kingston.

Taxes may be paid to the town collector, Charles Jansen, at Winchell's store on January 14, or at Grant DeSilva's place at Boiceville on January 24. For the next 30 days following the collector will receive tax money at his residence near Krumville.

On the evening of New Year's Day, 1887, local people gathered in Ladew Hall for the presentation of a drama, "The Social Glass", by the dramatic Society. On the following day, which was Sunday, the Rev. J. T. Bergen preached in the Reformed Church and at an election of officers held by the Sunday School, Judge Dewitt C. Davis was chosen superintendent of the school.

The residence of Burton Wheat of Main street is being wired for electric lights.

George Giles, the building contractor, has completed the building of a new chicken house for Miss Bertha Green.

There is very little water left in the Gilboa reservoir, according to Patrolman Michael Allen, of the board of water supply police, who resides here. The Gilboa water is being continually diverted to the Ashokan basins in order to meet the unprecedented winter demand for water in the big city, Mr. Allen says. Despite the heavy intake here, the water line in Ashokan is so far below normal that a number of islands dot the surface of this great lake. The aerator is not spouting these days, either, greatly to the disappointment of sundry visitors who motor to the dam at this season.

January 4, 1884, marked the passing of Hiram J. Winchell, who conducted a farm of 150 acres and cider mill at Olive Bridge. Mr. Winchell's funeral was held in the Methodist Church on the 6th.

N. Malcolm and family of Newark, N. J., have rented the MacDonough place on the old state road, now owned by Robert Secor, and have moved into the house. Mr. Malcolm, who is a carpenter by trade, brought his household effects and tools to this place in his own truck.

Mrs. Earl Elmendorf and son, Howard Brooks, are visiting Mrs. Elmendorf's mother, Mrs. Kenny, at the latter's home in Boston.

George Thompson, who lives on the Grossman place this winter, appears to be leading local poultrymen in the competition for the solid ivory nest egg to be awarded the producer who persuades his hens and pullets to break the early winter egg record. Mr. Thompson, who gets about three dozen of the golden nuggets from some 53 fowls, attributes much of his success to the judicious use of alfalfa leaves in conjunction with the laying mash, thus providing his flock with an appetizing green ration so essential to a balanced diet.

January does not always come wafting in on balmy zephyrs, as witness the entrance of that month in '79. The 3rd was featured by zero weather and extremely high winds; what was said to have been the strongest gale in at least 30 years unroofed some buildings and blew down others. Very high snowdrifts were made by this wind, which continued through the 4th with decreased intensity.

Movie fans from here who took in the picture, "Marianne", at the Broadway Theatre recently, express themselves as having been greatly amused and entertained by the film. The acting of Marian Davies is said to approach perfection, while the comical capers of the Yankee doughboys in France compare favorably with "The Big Parade" as a risibility tickler. Country people appreciate the efforts of the Kingston theatres to provide their patrons with three-star pictures and the night must need to be very stormy indeed to keep them home when such an attraction is showing in town.

Familiar faces in the village during the week included the members of the Chase families, who have a summer home near Tice-Tenyck mountain. The Chases came here to spend New Year's.

Dunskin Lynch, son of Denis Tilden Lynch, the author, has become one of Shokan's most energetic trappers. Young Lynch, whose home is the old Henry Bogart place, reports a fine white weasel as his latest catch, made in one of his sets back in the mountains.

The approach of the tax gatherer's heyday serves to remind us that, among other things, there apparently has always been in this section such an husbandman of the public's surplus cash. At any rate, as far back as January 3, 1868, one Peter A. Wolven sat for his first day's collections at the hotel of Hiram Barton in Olive city. Mr. Barton's place was a favorite meeting place for town auditors, political conventions and lawsuits.

Miss Josephine Nadal left for New York on Saturday after a week's visit with her folks here. Mrs. Isobel Lopez, who accompanied her sister, Miss Nadal, to the city, has returned and is again at home. Mrs. B. Nadal also has been spending some time in New York.

Doctor Dumond, Olive's faithful physician, while in Shokan the other day, observed that he had but recently rounded out thirty years of professional service in this town. The doctor, who at present is located in Tongore, formerly practiced at at West Shokan, where he succeeded Dr. George Van Gaasbeeck. After all these busy years, Doctor Dumond is still very much on the job and his services are increasingly called for.

One of the big trucks of Adam Gobel, Inc., of New York, is now supplying several of the merchants in this section with fresh meats. The firm has a distributing branch in Kingston and a Mr. Harvey is their courteous driver for this route.

An event of 1850 was the donation party held at the Reformed Church parsonage on the evening of January 3 for the Rev. J. N. Voorhees, the pastor. Ninety persons took tea at this affair. On the 9th, to further insure the comfort of the good domine and his family, a wood bee was held at the parsonage and the men of the church laid by a good big stock of fuel for the stoves of the manse.

Mrs. Myrtle Chambers, nee Barringer, called on friends here one day recently. Mrs. Chambers, who formerly resided at Samsonville, now makes her home in Delaware county.

Fifteen local members of the Mt. Tremper Grange were among the 75 persons present at the Christmas tree and initiation held at Grange Hall at The Corner on Friday night, December 27. Floyd Terwilliger of Ashokan represented good-hearted old Saint Nick at the party and after Floyd had very capably "done his duty", games were played and refreshments served. Eight persons received the third and fourth degrees on this occasion. Fred Weeks and Arthur Myers are new members of No. 1,468 from Shokan.

Week-end guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Winchell were the following New York city people: Leonard Hyams, Sr., Miss Emmie Hyams, Leonard Hyams and Miss Mary Wells. Young Mr. Hyams is taking a course preparatory to medicine at Syracuse University and his sister is teacher of English at Hunter College. Miss Wells is a student at the Julia Richmond High School for Girls.

Miss Edna Longyear has returned to the metropolis after spending the holiday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Longyear.

Perry Davis, the hustling Marbletown wood dealer, has a number of customers in Shokan. Perry formerly lived at Boiceville, but now operates from the vicinity of Atwood.

Grange Master Homer Markle, Jr., announces a public installation to be held on January 11, at which time the Grange officers elected on November 10 will be installed in the presence of State Worthy Master Freeman. Everyone is cordially invited, Mr. Markle says.

DARWIN REPUDIATED.

Sir Arthur Keith still sticks to Darwin's theory of man's descent or ascent from apes, and Dr. Henry Fairfield Osborn, president of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, still denies that there is any real basis for that theory, contending, in fact, that discoveries since Darwin's time have exploded the theory of our kinship with the monkey tribe. In a recent address before the association of which he is president Dr. Osborn said he believed in the evolution of man, but not that "he came from apes," declaring that man "came along a path of his own and never passed through the ape stage." He put man's origin back fifty million years, and substituted for the ape-man evidences of the "dawn man," a true human being from the beginning, a thinking, tool-making man, altogether apart from the tree-dwelling ancestors of present day apes. Dr. Osborn discussed "the most startling discovery of the twentieth century, the full significance of which we have only recently learned to estimate"—the discovery that "the Piltdown man of Sussex, England, is indubitably human, and not from the Quarternary but from the previous or Tertiary age."

The average man may not be able to follow the Osborn reasoning any better than he was able to follow that of Darwin. He may even be inclined to suspect that neither has succeeded in "proving it." But he is apt to prefer Dr. Osborn and welcome his view, for he naturally likes to think that his remote ancestors were something better than chattering monkeys.

TOBACCO CHEWING.

There is a story that in consequence of an earthquake in Japan a globe-trotting English lady in the midst of her bath was hurled, together with the bathtub, through the walls of the hotel, landing at the feet of a passing American in the street, and when he politely offered obviously needed assistance the lady said that etiquette forbade her to accept it because they had not been introduced. This is indirectly recalled by a warning sounded by Vice-President Stone of the Farm Board. In the good old times no generous American was prevented either by lack of a formal introduction or by taxes from offering a bite of his tobacco-plug to a stranger with whom he happened to be thrown, but now, Mr. Stone complains, unless the government reduces the tax on chewing tobacco the old-time generous spirit displayed in the more or less promiscuous offering of a "chaw" will become extinct.

When a sizable plug could be bought at a reasonable price, he says, chews were freely offered to bystanders and nobody cared how much they bit off, but now in consequence of the tax-raised price "the buyer, formerly liberal with his plug, seeks privacy when he takes a chew in order to avoid sharing with others." But is this change due either to the increased cost of the plug or to an invasion of the British requirement of a formal introduction, and is the change really country-wide? Are there not still left rural districts in which "chaws" are freely taken and offered in the open, with the old-time result of rivulets of brown liquid whenever the cuspidor failed to get its dues? However that may be, there is at least room for the suspicion that the chief reason for this new, unmanly, stealthy biting into the plug is that public tobacco chewing is now widely frowned upon and can no longer be regarded as "stylish".

FIRST CHRISTMAS CARDS.

It has been claimed that the Christmas card idea originated in Great Britain, and the case is cited of an Englishman who in 1816 designed a Christmas card and mailed copies of it to his friends during the December holidays of that year. But it is now believed to be well established that Christmas cards were mailed in France a century earlier. It seems that in a book published in 1765 it is recorded that earlier in the 18th century a Frenchman named Decles, in order "to save himself the trouble of writing a quantity of letters at the beginning of the year, made it a custom for several years to print two verses on a card which he sent to all his friends." Examples of his good wishes in verse are quoted.

Accepting this proof that the Christmas card is not a Nordic but a Latin invention, and that "the blame or praise, as you will, is due the French," the Baltimore Sun facetiously remarks: "Since the Christmas card industry in the United States gives promise that before long it will be a worthy rival for steel and automobiles, the question of just where it was launched and by whom is obviously important. Whether it's important as an argument for breaking off diplomatic relations with the country of origin, or of erecting a monument and singing hymns of praise, seems to be a question on which there is the widest divergence of opinion. In any case responsibility for the card should be placed on the French, where it belongs."

The late Lieut. Anen S. Fletcher of the Philippine Constabulary is said to have been "worshipped" by the Mohammedan Moro tribes of Mindanao and Sulu because "they knew him to be fearless and believed him to be impartial and fair." A good man gone.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

CHANGE BODY STRUCTURE?

I met a chap some time ago who said he didn't think or care much about what he did from the health standpoint any more. He had read a book by a college professor which stated that one's life and health depended entirely on heredity that nothing could change the "germ plasm," or the body structure, after you were born.

Now it is true that your folks handed down red hair, long arms, blue eyes, a fair brain, natural likes and dislikes toward persons and foods. Nothing can alter these things.

But a flower or seed put into good soil, kept free from weeds, looks a whole lot different from the same seed put into a poor soil.

Boys and girls given good food, outdoor air, and permitted to play, look entirely different from children without these things. They are different mentally, morally and physically. The germ plasm isn't changed, but the children are.

Children who are vaccinated against smallpox, diphtheria and other diseases simply do not die, whilst those who are not vaccinated show a considerable proportion of deaths.

In communities where diphtheria has wrought terrible havoc, and preventive measures have been instituted there have been no deaths in the past seven years.

In institutions where half the children were given preventive treatment and the other half were not, those given the preventive treatment kept free, whilst the other half had numerous cases, with some deaths.

Further, most serious heart cases followed by death can be traced to rheumatism. Most cases of rheumatism can be traced to infected teeth or tonsils.

If infected teeth or tonsils are removed before rheumatism ensues, then there are going to be fewer cases of heart disease and fewer deaths. Another case where the germ plasm does not enter into the matter.

And still further. In the examination of recruits for overseas service we found some young men with chests too small to pass the required test. A few months in a Y. M. C. A. or other gymnasium, and the chest was large enough—more muscle, and more capacity. A change in the man but no change in the germ plasm.

And so with various conditions that render an individual unfit for his or her work—not enough exercise, too much food, alcohol or tobacco, not enough sleep, a sluggish liver, a lazy intestine. Any of these will lower his efficiency or working capacity.

No, it is true that you can't change the germ plasm but you can certainly take what your folks gave you and by a little thought can see what your actual condition of health is.

You can then think of what it is possible to do with that body of yours. If your efficiency is only 80 per cent, you may bring it up to 90 or more, by getting defects cleared away, and then watching your food, sleep and exercise.

A QUESTION of HONOR

by Ruth Cross

SYNOPSIS: Anne Wetzel is persuaded to accept an invitation to the Sierra lodge of Leon Morse, whom her aunt is urging as a suitor because of his wealth. There, on a walk alone, she meets a stranger who is indifferent to her beauty and whose eccentric partner warns her to "keep 'im off her." She is angered by the stranger's actions and returns to the lodge. Anne answers Morse with spirit when he chides her for going out alone and her aunt warns she will no longer support her if she loses Morse through rashness. Robert Douglas, Morse's attorney, sees the girl and is pleased because it does not fit his plans to have Morse married to a clever woman.

Chapter 4

TIME FOR DIVIDENDS

ANNE pulled herself up slowly to a sitting position, got rather painfully to her feet—she was just beginning to be conscious of muscles and tendons that she hadn't ever known she had before—and crossed over to one of the French windows which opened out towards the mountains.

As she rested one hand against the window frame, the flowing sleeve of the negligee fell back, revealing a flawlessly modeled arm, the flesh more subtly brilliant in coloring and texture than any marble.

She knew that she was a very beautiful woman; knew moreover exactly what that beauty was worth. The fact lent a certain sureness and consciousness of power to her bearing. And yet she had the good sense and perception, rarely met with in women of her type, to realize that the beauty was the direct gift of God and to take no credit to herself therefor. She was merely the custodian——

It was some moments before Anne spoke, and then she did not look back at her aunt. "You haven't given me much of a chance at that—at making my own living—have you? My training has been so—highly specialized."

The older woman made no answer. She took up her knitting again. Anne stood staring absently out of the window. She was recalling her childhood, barren of the affection she craved. Perhaps her aunt hadn't known how to express her affection; perhaps, and that seemed more probable, love had taken the form of an overpowering ambition.

Long before she was out of her teens, Anne had known by some sort of divination that she was expected to repay her expensive upbringing and education by making a spectacular marriage. She had been just an investment, trained as rigidly as any athlete for the sordid business of "landing" a rich husband. Her present flippant, half cynical mode of speech and thought were not a true reflection of her best and deepest self; rather a defense set up between that self and her enforced manner of life.

Spending And flirting, flirting with every man who crossed her path—those were the two amusements that had whiled away the period of waiting for the "right husband."

She turned with one of her swift moods of penitence. "But never mind, Auntie, I know I'm a selfish pig, but don't you worry. I'm going to marry Leon Morse if I have to propose to him myself, and everything will be all right."

* * * *

"But I don't see any railroad," Anne objected, laughing, as she lowered the field glasses. "I don't see anything but the irrigation company's excavations and offices and workmen, and I don't hear anything but the irrigation company's fiendish noises!"

She handed the glasses hastily to Mr. Douglas, and clapped her hands to her ears as another unearthly blast rent the air.

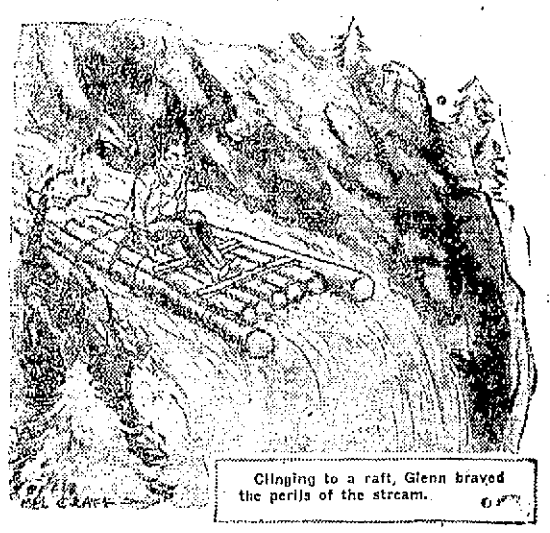
Robert Douglas smiled. He was always smiling. Anne had an idea that he was secretly laughing at them all, although he covered the indulgence with an air of nonchalant good humor which was quite disarming.

Seeing Douglas' lips move, she withdrew her fingers doubtfully a few inches from her ears. "I was just saying that the road isn't built up quite this far yet," he repeated. "I think they won't blast again for 10 minutes or so," he added reassuringly. "You see, the irrigation company is running a tunnel through the mountain there, working three eight hour shifts at each end. The water for the reservoir—most of it—is to come from a canyon on the other side of the mountain. A pretty remarkable piece of work, so Bretton says."

He made a slight gesture toward the short, wiry little man who was standing with Morse on the edge of a boulder overlooking the valley and the nearest mountain range to the west. John Bretton was chief engineer for the railroad construction work.

"Bretton thinks pretty highly of this fellow Glenn, who's putting the irrigation project through," Douglas remarked as Morse joined them.

"Bretton's a fool," Morse interjected curtly. His temper was evidently not a little ruffled by the conversation he had just concluded with his chief engineer.



Clinging to a raft, Glenn braved the perils of the stream.

"Well, in that case you're paying him about 10 times what he's worth," the attorney retorted cheerfully. "Did he tell you how Glenn located the site for his tunnel?"

His employer's blunt negative was not encouraging, but Anne's eyes were, and Douglas addressed himself to her—with a slight smile at Morse's restlessness. "Why, it seems he threw himself strapped to a raft of some sort into this canyon which nobody had ever been known to come out of alive. He floated, swam, clung to roots, went over falls, through whirlpools—lost his grub-sack, but managed to hold on to his note-books, which were wrapped in oilskin, and—well, at the end of 10 days he came out unhurt and with all the data he wanted about his water sources and the best location for the tunnel."

The railroad magnate made no comment other than a contemptuous shrug, but Anne gazed at the narrator with quickening interest and enthusiasm. "I'd like to know that man," she declared with conviction. "That's my idea of a real man!"

Morse turned a curious, searching glance on her. "What is your idea of a real man?" he queried.

"Oh—stubborn determination—" Anne threw out her hands in an expressive gesture, "putting a thing through like that regardless—hurling defiance in the teeth of nature—" She broke off, noting the kindling admiration in his eyes. She knew that she had—this time unwittingly—struck the right note with him.

Morse returned to where Bretton was figuring absorbedly over his drawing, and Douglas indicated to Anne the chasm between the mountain ranges.

"That," he explained, "is what we shall have to bridge, however, thanks to your hero of the canyon and his precious reservoir! Our line of track ought to run almost parallel with their dam."

"They wouldn't object to that, would they?" Anne inquired.

"No, they wouldn't object," he said, "but—unfortunately our track would be some 30 feet under water when their system was put into operation! That's what's holding up the surveying. Bretton says the only way out is to build a bridge. The bridge will cost a lot of money, which doesn't count so much, but it means also three hours added to the schedule, and that does count—like the deuce!"

(Copyright, Ruth Cross.)

ROSENDALE GRANGE CELEBRATES CHRISTMAS.

Rosendale, Jan. 2.—Rosendale Grange celebrated Christmas in real old fashion. After the business meeting, presided over by Worthy Master C. I. LeFever, Jr., conducted in due form, reports of various committees, new names introduced, for membership in the order. Brother Henry Mollenhauer, moved for many interesting matters to benefit the work in which members are engaged. The lecture hour was in charge of Worthy Lecturer, Mrs. Arthur Merrihew, who arranged a fine Christmas program of instrumental and vocal music, singing of carols and recitations. The exchanging of gifts created no end of merriment, after which refreshments were served, then some more music and dancing brought the delightful meeting to a close. New members will be initiated on Monday, January 13. On Saturday January 18, the new officers will be installed, when it is hoped all members will be present. Considering the inclement weather, members were not deterred and there was a large attendance at the Christmas meeting.

Ah, That It Might Come True!

Our New Year's wish assumes this form:—
Would that someone would find a rule
Whereby in winter we'd be warm
And in the summer we'd be cool.

Tommy: "Did you have the flu as bad as I did? I had to stay away from school for three weeks."

Johnny: "I had it much worse than that—I had it in the holidays."

"I Buy in Kingston"

—Because my interests are here.

—Because I want to see the goods.

—Because I want to get what I want when I pay for it.

—Because here I live and here I hope to die.

—Because the man I buy from stands back of the goods.

—Because the man I buy from pays his part of town, county and state taxes.

—Because every dollar I spend at home works for the community in which I live.

—Because the community good enough for me to live in is good enough to buy in.

—Because the man I buy from helps support my school, my lodge, my church, my home.

—Because when ill-luck, misfortune or bereavement come, the man I buy from is here with his kindly greeting, his words of cheer and his pocketbook, if need be.

Majorities are nearly always wrong..... that's the reason they rarely ever elect the right man.

A Kingston man was taken ill and his wife hurried him to the hospital.

"Has he got pajamas?" said the matron, as she arranged for his admission.

"Pajamas," exclaimed his wife. "I dunno what it is, but he's got an awful pain in the stummick."

Misfortunes often come garbed in riches, but good fortune generally appears at the front door wearing overalls and looking like hard work.

Hired Man: "Nope, sorter lost my pull."

Most relatives are distant relatives when you are broke.

Little Junior Shearly, four years old, one day heard his mother singing: "My Father and Mother are Irish;" and the next day his mother heard him singing, "Grandpa 'and Grandma are Irish."

The man who is too busy to serve God and humanity is—too busy.

"Heavens," said the young Miss as she inspected Granny's wedding ring, "what heavy, unwieldly things those were fifty years ago."

"Yes, dear," said Granny, "but you must remember that in my day they were made to last a lifetime."

Try your hand at boosting once and awhile..... it will do you good ..... any jackass can kick.

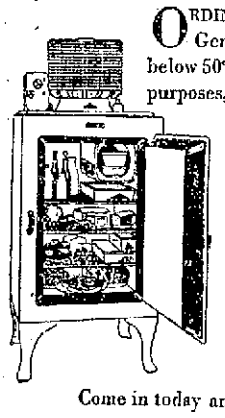
The GENERAL ELECTRIC has always had a FREEZING REGULATOR —and it is accessible



ORDINARILY the usual low temperature in the General Electric Refrigerator... always well below 50°... is sufficient for all food preservation purposes, as well as for the normal supply of ice cubes. But there are times when a greater degree of cold is required for desserts or a still greater number of ice cubes.

The General Electric Freezing Regulator has been scientifically designed to meet such emergencies. It is on top of the cabinet, with the rest of the mechanism, where it can be seen and adjusted with least trouble.

TELLS EXPERIENCE AS DEATH NEARS

Student Gives His Account of Tragedy in Alps.

Vienna, Austria.—An unusually precise account of a not unusual tragedy of the Alps—freezing to death—was furnished by the discovery in the frozen hands of a dead Innsbruck student of a diary containing an account of his last hours.

The nineteen-year-old student of the Innsbruck Technical college, Franz Lutz, set out on a solitary ascent of the Gross Loffler, in the Zillerthal Alps. His body was discovered by a search party of Alpine jaegers and gendarmes on the glacier below the Gross Loffler peak, frozen so hard in the new snow that it had to be dug out with icepicks.

Lutz related in his diary how he began the descent at five o'clock on Sunday afternoon. He told how he crashed in the dusk over a 200 foot wall of ice onto the glacier. Though badly injured, he managed to drag himself over the ice for a hundred yards, when his progress was impeded by a crevasse.

"I do not suffer particularly," he wrote, "but the blood seems to be slowly turning to ice in my veins and I suppose that before morning comes I shall be frozen to death. If help does not reach me before then, I want it to be arranged that the little which I possess in the world should go to my brother. And I want my parents to pardon me for my foolhardiness in making this dangerous tour alone." He then quietly set down a description of the horror and grandeur of a storm in the Alps as seen by one slowly freezing to death on the edge of a glacier, until he lost consciousness.

The search party found that he had followed a wrong path and in his descent was undertaking a quite impossible task.

Heroic Missouri Girl Saves Child From Well

Macon, Mo.—Word has reached here of a thrilling act of heroism by which Rowena Yount, a seventeen-year-old girl, saved the life of a two-year-old child that had fallen in a 30-foot well containing ten feet of water, on a farm east of Bloomington.

The baby is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Yount. It was toddling about in the yard and suddenly headed for the well. When Rowena and Mrs. Yount looked around the little one was missing. Rowena, Mrs. Yount and Rowena's mother, Mrs. W. F. Yount, ran for the well.

They could see the child bobbing up and down. Rowena didn't hesitate at the deep black hole.

Carefully negotiating the edges, the girl let herself down until her feet caught hold of the rough rock lining the well. Using feet and arms with all her skill and strength, Rowena at last got down to the water and seized the child by the arm and pulled it out of the water. Unable to use her hands, she could not climb back.

The two women summoned Arthur McDaniels from a neighboring farm. McDaniels climbed down in the well and took the child from Rowena's stiffened arms, slowly made his way up the well and handed the unconscious baby to the waiting women. Then he climbed back and helped Rowena out. The baby was soon restored to consciousness.

Supreme Court Upholds Underling's Signatures

Washington.—The right of a cabinet member to have assistants to sign the great piles of documents which comes before him has been upheld by the Supreme court. The court has rejected an appeal by Marinelli Constantino, Buffalo, N. Y., from a deportation order issued against him. The appeal was based on the contention that the order was illegal because Secretary of Labor Davis did not himself sign it. A great deal of the government's business is transacted in this way by assistants and undersecretaries.

The daughter, it is reported, has written to police confessing that she falsely accused her father of wronging her but that she did so under a threat of death from the man who actually was guilty of the crime.

Hurley, Jan. 2.—The Christmas exercises Friday evening of the Sunday school were most enjoyable. A special program was carried out by members of the school, followed by Mr. and Mrs. Dunbar singing the Christmas carol, "It Came Upon the Midnight Clear", in their usual able manner. Christmas presents were distributed to the children and ice cream and cake was served to all who cared to join the merry party.

The Christmas spirit generally prevailed in the community. One worthy of mention was the large Christmas tree in front of the residence of William Eltinge brilliantly lighted with different colored electric lights.

Miss Harriet Dixon, R. N., of the Methodist Episcopal Hospital, Brooklyn, and Miss Ruth Dixon, who is a student at Cortlandt Normal School, spent the holidays at home with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Dixon.

Miss Cornelia DeWitt of Brooklyn, who has been spending the Christmas holidays with her family, at the DeWitt home, returned to Brooklyn New Year's day, accompanied by her sisters, the Misses Elizabeth and Anna DeWitt.

Mr. Doak, of the New Brunswick Theological Seminary, will have charge of the services Sunday morning.

Theodore Thielpape and friend are spending the New Year holidays with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Thielpape.

Among the social events of the holiday season was the New Year's reception given by Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Warren at Wynkoop farms to their friends on New Year's afternoon. The house was beautifully decorated with evergreens, holly and mistletoe. A large number of the young people remained for supper and dance, until the wee small hours.

MUST SELL LAND OR GO TO JAIL

One-Time Millionaire Finds Himself in Curious Tangle With Law.

Uniontown, Pa.—In 1915 Josiah V. Thompson owned more virgin coal land than any man in the world. He had assets worth $76,000,000. He defied the great steel companies that wanted his possessions—at their prices. He was president of a huge "model" bank, and a power in political circles.

Now, at seventy-five, penniless, he faces imprisonment for the rest of his life unless the financiers he once defied will buy the 45,000 acres of coal land upon which he still holds options. He must have at least $130,000 to satisfy the heirs of Emma Messmore, who charges that he mismanaged her estate. He must find $250,000 to return to the estate of John Nicolls, father of the Princess of Thurn and Taxis, which he is alleged to have borrowed without security.

His transactions as trustee of the Nicolls estate caused Thompson to be charged with embezzlement, for which he was arrested in Altoona on his way from Pittsburgh to New York to attempt to raise money on his coal fields.

Millions Melt Away.

Thompson's millions melted away like snow under a tropical sun when the First National bank of Uniontown, of which he was president, was forced into bankruptcy in 1915. Friends of Thompson blamed the insolvency of the institution on the efforts of the big steel companies to pick up the valuable coal lands Thompson was holding at bargains by having him forced into bankruptcy. Whatever the cause of the failure, Thompson had to give up most of his fortune to satisfy the demands of the bank's creditors.

Ever since the crash of his fortunes Thompson has been trying to sell the acres of coal land which he still holds. Time and again the United States Steel corporation, the Bethlehem Steel corporations were said to be ready to make the purchase, which would have brought Thompson from $10,000,000 to $20,000,000. But each time the deal fell through.

In 1912 Thompson divorced his second wife and settled a $1,000,000 trust fund on her in lieu of alimony or dower rights. In Pennsylvania at that time a husband paid alimony even if the wife was proved to be the guilty party. In 1920, when Thompson was nearly destitute, his former wife died and willed her estate to found an orphan asylum. Thompson contested her will, claiming that only the income, not the principal of the trust fund, had been settled on her, but the decision went against him.

From Bad to Worse.

Since then the muddle of his financial affairs has gone from bad to worse. Again and again he has been haled into court to account for his acts as trustee of the Messmore and Nicolls estates. Each time he gained a stay in the hope that he would be able to realize on his coal lands.

Upon his arrest in Altoona he was shown the courtesy usually accorded capitalists and was not imprisoned. When he arrived in Uniontown in the custody of County Detective A. A. Dowling he was asked to share the hospitality of the county detective's home, and instead of occupying a prison cot for the first time the ex-multimillionaire rested on a comfortable bed in the home of Downing within a stone's throw of the courthouse.

It is indicated here unofficially that from the United States Steel corporation is expected to come the flow of gold for the Greene county tracts.

This fund has been developed but little and would serve as a huge supply of fuel for many years to come.

The W. J. Rainey company and other corporations are seeking a foothold in the Greene county fields and the present acreage, averaging about $250,000 to $300,000 an acre, is optioned at bargain prices.

For the present J. V. has taken off the legal shackles that have banished him from his home city where he saw his millions mounting and then fade.

Wet Sport

Blandford, Dorset, England—The most popular event of the outdoor season was a race in which competitors walked three times around the village, stopping at the end of each lap to drink a pint of beer at an inn.

Becomes Bigamist to Escape Married Life

Clarksburg, W. Va.—A speedy sentence was asked by Alva DeSoto, a farm laborer, when arraigned in court here, on a charge of bigamy.

DeSoto told police he married Nancy Lantz thirteen years ago but could not stand more than seven years of living with her. Then somebody tipped him off that if he married again without a divorce both ceremonies would be invalidated by a penitentiary term. So he married Amelia Bennett, a waitress, and then surrendered.

He said he figured a "penitentiary divorce" would be both easier and cheaper than a regular separation.

GAS BUGGIES—A Sad Story.

MT. TREMPER.

Mt. Tremper, Jan. 1.—The Christmas tree and entertainment of the Sunday school was held at the hall on Tuesday evening. A very fine program was given and each and every one taking part did splendidly. At the close of the program Santa arrived and distributed very nice gifts of candy and oranges to the children. After he had disposed of these he came in with another large array of gifts, candy and oranges, the treat of the Mt. Tremper Grange to every child in the community. The Grange also served refreshments of cocoa, ice cream and cake to all present, a table being set for the children, which looked pretty with doll favors. The hall was nicely and attractively decorated with green and red festoons and evergreens. A vote of thanks is given to those who helped make the occasion such a success.

Coughs Go!
"I thought Joe would have to be in bed a WEEK . . ."

"Little Joe certainly caught a man-size cold. He coughed and sneezed—he felt grippy and cross. The druggist advised Smith Brothers' Cough Syrup. I could remember using Smith Brothers' drops since I was a little girl, so I didn't hesitate to let sonny take the syrup. That very afternoon he was getting better. His nose cleared, he coughed less.
"In two days he was completely restored, went back to school. I thought he would have to be in bed for at least a week. Smith Brothers' helped him so quickly!" MRS. M. PAIGE

INTER-STATE
LONG DISTANCE RATES
REDUCED

Effective January 1, 1930

Rates reduced to points 60 to 300 miles distant.

Effective January 1st, station-to-station day rates to points in other states, approximately 60 to 300 miles distant, are generally reduced. The reductions on such calls will be 10 cents in most cases, and 5 cents in others. For example, the basic station-to-station day rate on a call from Albany to Springfield, Mass., will be 50 cents instead of 60; to Boston, Mass., 80 cents instead of 90; the rate to Montreal, Canada, $1.05 instead of $1.15; and Toronto, Canada, $1.40 instead of $1.45.

Service Features Retained.

The improvements in service features made at the time of previous reductions on inter-state business—longer evening and night discount periods, reversal privilege on station-to-station calls, etc.—remain in effect.

The present reductions in the various long distance rates is part of the fundamental policy of the Bell System—to provide the best possible telephone service at the lowest cost consistent with financial safety.

Events Around The Empire State

(By The Associated Press.)

New York (AP).—Opening of a post office in this city in 1783 is said to mark the beginning of the first regular mail service in the United States.

Albany (AP).—Of 174 deaths in industry in New York state during November, 1929, according to the latest report of the state labor department, 63 occurred in construction work; 35 in manufacturing industries; 23 in transportation, and 21 were attributed to harmful substances, electricity, hot substances and explosions.

Geneva (AP).—A police school for officers of Geneva, Canandaigua, Clyde, Lyons, Newark, Penn Yan, Waterloo and Seneca Falls will be opened here this month. There will be three classes each week for ten weeks, with Chief R. William Morris of Geneva as director, assisted by specialists in various phases of police work.

Rome (AP).—Post office clerks in this city sorted 2,500 misdirected cards and letters after the Christmas rush was over. This was nearly twice the amount in 1928, when 1,500 letters were not delivered because of improper or incomplete addresses. During the Christmas season just passed 164 letters were mailed without stamps.

Madrid (AP).—Roads in this section of St. Lawrence county were so badly drifted with snow a short time ago that it was impossible for even horses to make their way along them, while motoring was, of course, out of the question. A local doctor reverted to pioneer methods and visited his patients on snowshoes.

Troy (AP).—Cornelius F. Burns took the oath of office of mayor of this city for the sixth time before City Clerk Philip A. Murphy a few days ago while motion picture photographers made a record of the proceedings. Mayor Burns is the first executive of the city to hold the office for more than four terms.

Abundant Proofs That Sound Waves Can Kill

Living creatures can be struck dead by sound waves too highly pitched for the human ear to hear them, writes T. C. Bridges. These high frequency waves—called super-sonics—have been tried on animals and produced instant death. The sound appears to shatter the blood corpuscles, and death is as sure and sudden as if the creatures had been struck by lightning. Sound can do many things which seem mysterious and almost miraculous. For instance, fire can be extinguished by sound. Some little time ago Mr. Charles Kellogg of California gave a demonstration of the power of sound over flame, and by drawing a violin bow across a piece of aluminum extinguished a burning gas jet at 50 feet. Sound vibrations can not only break a wine glass but can damage a building. It is suspected that the deep, vibrating notes of organs cause vibrations which may actually weaken the structure of a church or cathedral.

Power From Niagara

The first application of Niagara power was to a sawmill built by a Frenchman in 1725 on the New York bank near the rapids. At present Niagara power is used in Syracuse, 165 miles from its source, and also in Windsor, Ont., 240 miles away. By treaty the amount of water that may be diverted from Niagara for power purposes has been limited to 36,000 cubic feet per second on the Canadian side and 20,000 cubic feet per second on the United States side. The power is used nearby in electro-chemical industries, in the manufacture of aluminum, ferro-silicon, carborundum, artificial graphite, liquid chlorine, calcium carbide, cyanamide and other products.

"Personality"

The term "personality" was used by Wycliff in 1380 to designate the quality peculiar to a human being or person, and yet it was not until recently that the word began to enjoy any popularity. Neither Shakespeare, wielding as he did an extraordinarily comprehensive vocabulary, nor Milton, with his stupendous command of the English language, even to its most recondite recesses, ever employed the word that has had such a long history and, more recently, has come to acquire an interesting past in assuming the abbreviated and piquant form "it."—A. A. Roback in the Century.

Magic of Trees

There is magic in the word "Trees." It means so much to the lover of nature. Trees stand for all that is best in life—beauty, loyalty, steadfastness of purpose, and to sum it up, they are symbolic of life itself.

They live to give. They give us fruit, they bring the birds with their cheerful songs, they give us beautiful surroundings, they shelter the livestock from the hot sun, they retard the evaporation of moisture from the land, they lessen the velocity of the wind and furnish us restful pleasure whenever we are near them.—United States Daily.

Serious Operation

A little neighbor girl was telling that a friend of her mother's was to undergo an operation next day. Asked whether the friend's tonsils were to be removed, she said:

"Oh, no! It's lots worser than that—mother told what it was, but it's such a big name; but anyway I think it means her liver and her gizzard!"

New Year Hooch Causes 5 Deaths

New York, Jan. 2 (AP).—Liquor was blamed by hospital physicians today for the death of one woman and four men as an aftermath of the New Year's celebration here. Hospitals treated 79 cases of alcoholism.

The number of persons admitted to hospitals suffering from effects of over-indulgence in alcoholic beverages was 28 more than were treated a year ago and 41 more than New Year's Day, 1928. Six of the 35 cases at Bellevue were pronounced acute. One man was in a state of coma and physicians said his condition was critical. One of the acute cases was a 20-year-old girl taken from a night club.

Police officials said the New Year's Eve crowds were more disorderly, destructive of property and harder to handle than ever before.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

10,000 "Booster" Found Illegal

Says Corporation Counsel Flemming In a Lengthy Opinion Given By Him at the Request of Mayor Dempsey.

The opinion of Corporation Counsel Harry H. Flemming in regard to the inclusion in the city tax budget of the sum of $10,000 for the purpose of advertising Kingston as referred to in the annual message of Mayor E. J. Dempsey read at the annual meeting of the common council on New Year's Day, is a lengthy one. In brief, the corporation counsel held that the sum could not be legally raised by taxation.

The opinion, in full, follows:

December 30, 1929.

Hon. E. J. Dempsey,
Mayor, City of Kingston, N. Y.
Dear Mayor:

In conformity with your request I am setting forth what in my opinion is the legal status of the proposition to include in the budget for the coming year an item of $10,000 for "advertising the city" as requested by the Uptown, Downtown and Central Business Mens' organizations, and as approved by the Rotary and Kiwanis clubs.

The authority for an expenditure of this nature, if it exists should be found in the city charter, or in an act of the legislature of the state. Reference to the charter discloses that the Common Council has jurisdiction over matters pertaining to the control and management of all of the property of the city and the finances thereof, and that no debt or liability which may become a charge against the city or corporation shall be created or contracted except by the authority of the Common Council, or by virtue of the general statutes of the state. The specific authority conferred, as set forth in paragraphs 1-52 inclusive, of Section 120, deals with the usual and ordinary power and authority vested in a corporation of this type pertaining to the government of the city; there is apparently no attempt here to cover the subject of advertising the municipality.

The General City Law, Article 2a, Section 19, grants to every city power to regulate, manage, and control its property and local affairs, and Section 20 refers to certain specific powers subject to the Constitution and General Laws of the state. These specific grants cover generally the authority vested in the Council under the charter, and also authorize the construction of water supply systems, lighting systems for lighting streets, public buildings and public places, operation of markets, parks, playgrounds, the operation and maintenance of docks, piers, wharves and warehouses and other agencies of similar character, all of which are to be maintained for the instruction, enlightenment, improvement, entertainment, recreation and welfare of the inhabitants as it may deem appropriate or necessary for the public interest or advantage.

Under the City Home Rule Law, the latest enactment with reference to the government of cities throughout the state, authority is given to the local legislative body to adopt and amend local laws regulating the property affairs or government of the city, the conduct of its inhabitants and protection of their property, safety and health.

All that has been heretofore said is of course subject to the constitutional provision as contained in Section 10, Article 3, of the State Constitution, and which provides: "Nor shall any County, City, Town or Village be allowed to incur any indebtedness except for County, City, Town or Village purposes."

The question naturally arises as to the proper definition of the words, "city purposes," and as has been said it probably would be impossible to formulate a definition which would be of universal application. Some things are so inherently necessary for the welfare of the inhabitants of a municipality that no one would think of questioning their inclusion, such as the construction of school house, maintenance of streets and sewers. Others less necessary have come to be viewed as so contributing to the comfort and happiness of the citizens that no one is now disposed to question that they accomplish the "city purpose," such as parks, recreational grounds and public baths. There is still another class further removed from the justification of absolute necessity which includes the erection of monuments of commemoration of events of public importance, or in honor of individuals or classes of individuals who have greatly benefited the municipality by their accomplishments or sacrifices; the suitable entertainment of distinguished visitors; the appropriate welcome of soldiers returning from war; the celebration of anniversaries in national, state or local history. While not any of the latter are justified by the compulsion of necessity, they are of such a character when well and properly conducted, and serve such a purpose that they become recognized as acts which may be carried out by the municipality with the expenditure of public money.

In the light of the constitutional provision hereinbefore quoted, the acts of the legislature which we have briefly reviewed, and the charter of the city, we find no direct authority to the municipality to raise money by taxation for the purpose of advertising the city.

We understand that it has been urged that through means of advertising, new industries may be brought to the city, furnishing additional employment, and adding to the assessed value of the city. These reasons were advanced in a case considered by the Court of Appeals of this state, wherein the village of Douglas was authorized by special legislative enactment to issue internal improvement fund bonds in the sum of $10,000; the moneys to be subscribed for shares of capital stock of the Long Eddy Hydraulic & Manufacturing Co. The objects and purposes of the company were to some extent of public character, and sufficiently broad and extended to include public use, and by the erection and maintenance of a dam across the Delaware river in the town of Fremont, Sullivan county, between the county of Sullivan, in the state of New York, and the county of Wayne, in the state of Pennsylvania, by the company, the material growth and prosperity of the village of Douglas would have been largely increased and would have added a large tax paying element thereto, and increased the value of adjacent property. The court, in considering the matter, said that it might be conceded that this is a public purpose from the attainment of which will flow some benefit or convenience to the public, whether of the whole commonwealth or of a circumscribed community. In the latter case, however, the benefit or convenience must be direct and immediate from the purpose, and not collateral, remote or consequential; that the benefit to the public was remote and consequential.

It was further said, "Any such enterprise tends directly to the benefit of every citizen by the increase of general business activity, the greater facility of obtaining employment, the consequent increase of population, the enhancement in value of real estate and its readier sale, and the multiplication of conveniences. But these are not the direct and immediate public uses and purposes to which money taken by tax may be directed. Weismer v. Village of Douglas, 64 N. Y., 91, at 103.

Admitting all that has been said in favor of the inclusion of the item of $10,000 in the city budget for advertising purposes, the conclusion is inevitable that the benefit would not be direct and immediate but collateral, remote and consequential, and in view of the constitutional provision we conclude that the appropriations of the sum requested for the purpose of advertising the city is not that direct and immediate public use and purpose to which money raised by taxation may be directed.

Yours very truly,
H. H. FLEMMING,
Corporation Counsel.

Spring Frocks Adopt Sports Silk and Printed Pique

(Copyright, 1930, Fairchild)

Here is a tennis frock for a youthful enthusiast developed in white pique sprinkled with a novelty paisly design in navy blue. The armhole is cleverly outlined with white pique and the narrow white gilet is laced with ribbon to match the blue in the design. Incidentally reports from smart French resorts are to the effect that children are dressed in white patterned with small colored figures.

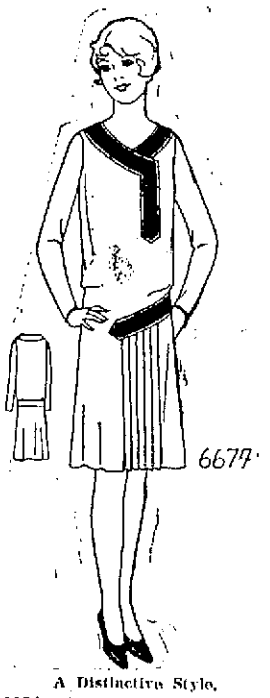
OUR DAILY PATTERN



A Distinctive Style.

6674. Asymmetric lines and plait fulness are featured in this attractive style. The front is in one piece, with a plait extension at the left side which is topped by a shaped hip band. This goes over the back below the bloused waist portion. The neck line is shaped above similar bands or facings. The sleeve is a fitted model.

This pattern is cut in 4 sizes: 8, 10, 12, and 14 years. To make the dress for a 12 year size will require 2⅞ yards of 39 inch material. To make the band facings as shown in the large view of contrasting material will require ⅞ yard 39 inches wide cut crosswise or lengthwise of the material. To bind or pipe the bands with bias binding will require 5 yards 1½ inch wide.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 12c in coin or stamps by the Pattern Department, The Freeman, Kingston, N. Y. Be sure to state the size wanted.

At Last A Treatment For Homely Doors

By MARGERY TAYLOR
(Interior Decoration Editor, McCall's Magazine. Written for The Freeman.

Something had to be done about doors.

Formerly, no matter how cleverly you decorated the room, when you got through there were always those large masses of uninteresting wood. And you were lucky if they weren't red mahogany.

The new interior decoration could not tolerate this problem, and has found delightful answers.

There's a room, for instance, in which the woodwork is ivory and the wallpaper lightly patterned. A charming individuality is imparted by door panels painted in one of the predominating colors of the wallpaper—say green, blue or rose.

Where walls are painted, the door can gracefully be brought into a two-color plan. Thus, if the walls are light eggshell tint and the woodwork cocoa colored, why not a line of coral all around the baseboard, with the inside of closet doors in the same color?

What could be a nicer answer to the door problem than one like this: Door frames deep gray, matching the three-foot wainscoting; the four panels of each door and the ceiling, azure blue; and around each panel a border motif in gray and darker blue?

And is there any real reason why

The Door Stands Transformed.

Painted motifs of innumerable kinds are possible and are especially good in kitchen, breakfast room or bedroom.

If, for instance, the draperies are chintz, the motif in the chintz may be copied. Or, if that is too much trouble, there are always the interesting paper cutouts, so easily pasted on and varnished over.

The chintz itself or wallpaper can easily be pasted and varnished. In a bedroom with plain walls, two doors covered with chintz or carefully chosen wallpaper panels become decorative instead of homely. This idea works wonders also in a small hallway or dining room. door decoration should be plain?

MAN SLAIN AS SWEETIE SEEKS TO WARN HIM

Woman Wanders Streets All Night to Urge Lover to Hide.

Newark, N. J.—Mary Impagliazza paced the cold streets of Newark all one night recently in search of Michael Iaccurino, for whom she had left her husband in Brooklyn. She wanted to find him, to warn him he must hide or he would die.

In her mind the events of the afternoon were fresh. After spending a week with Michael, who had left a wife and twelve children in Brooklyn to be with her, they had become conscious of guilt. He had called his wife and told her he was coming home. Mary had gone to her husband, a grocer, and begged forgiveness.

Cursed by Brother.

Her family and her husband were indifferent, all save her brother, Paul Cappiello, himself married and the father of five children. Paul, she told police, had cursed her and bound her in a chair when she refused to give him the address at which she and Michael had been living in Newark.

Then he had gagged her and searched through her purse. There he found a slip of paper. On it was written "11½ Grant street." He had loaded his revolver while she watched, cursed her one last time for a faithless wretch and flung out.

And now Mary wandered through the cold night looking for Michael. She must find him, must save him. Though she searched all night, it was in vain, and at seven o'clock in the morning she made her way toward their Grant street room.

"O, My Michael, My Michael!"

Finds Michael Slain.

As she went up the stairs she heard shouts and shots outside. Frightened, she rushed out to see a knot of people two doors away, collected in the opening of an alley. Through these she pushed, and there was Michael, prostrate.

His head in her arms, thirty-year-old Mary sobbed, "Oh, my Michael, my Michael!" The Michael to whom she cried could not answer; three bullets had drilled his brain.

The police led her away. "It was my brother, it was Paul!" she screamed, and the search for Paul Cappiello began.

Several hours later a widow heard the news with cries of grief. Nearby a husband was indifferent. "I don't want her back," said Vito Impagliazza. "He's dead? I am sorry."

While a widow mourned and a husband shrugged a woman went to the Butler street police station. She wanted police to find her husband and send him home to her and their five children. She said her husband is Paul Cappiello.

Unchanging Britons

At the town of Lyme Regis, in England, the town crier still daily reads the proclamation beginning: "Whereas Charles Stuart, son of the late tyrant, with divers of the English and Scotch nation, have been defeated . . ." and goes on to warn the populace against harboring this Charles, who died in 1689. This bulldog tenacity of the British is what always enables them to win out in the end.—Detroit News.

Eleanor Gunn On Fashions

The Tailor Again Becomes An Important Personage.

New York.—Judging from all signs and smybols, we are approaching a season in which tailors are coming into their own. The suit, for so long the minlstay of the spring wardrobe, is reinstated. At a time when fashions have gone unreservedly feminine this may seem strange, but the value of contrasts has always been recognized by smart folk, hence the fun of being strictly tailored part of the time and berufled the next. Besides which the modern tailormaid has no hesitency in adding a frill or so to the gilet of her suit.

The cape and the capelet are other possibilities of the spring season. Separate coats have grown fetching little capes, and jackets have been cast in the discard in favor of capes for some spring suit ensembles. One needs no introduction to the short cape for evening as a substitute for the coat type of wrap.

(Copyright, 1930, Fairchild.)

This model from Martial et Armand includes a street dress in black satinbacked marocain, with the short attached capelet over the upper arms and ecru georgette and lace at the neckline.

Other details on, which one feels inclined to bank, are lingerie touches here and there on dresses, under coats and on blouses and even hats. They are to offset the severity of man's wear woolens and of suits of intricately tailored details. Fabrics for both suits and coats run the gamut from man's wear woolens to the most feminine of silks. The silk suit is confidently expected for spring and is being worn in southern playgrounds. Shantung and taffeta being among the silks present, with, of course, marocain and flat crepes included.

Indians Had Boomerangs

The boomerang may not have been peculiar to the aborigines of Australia after all. Charles A. Bernheimer of the American museum says that such a weapon was found among other ancient relics of the basketmakers in a cave in southeastern Utah. "The boomerang, as far as I know," said the explorer, "is the first such weapon to be discovered in this country."

HE HARDLY KNOWS JUST WHO HE IS IN HIS OWN FAMILY

Indiana Farmer's Marriage Produces Enigma Requiring Skill of Master to Unravel.

Dublin, Ind.—The recent marriage of Omer Stant, age forty, a farmer near here, and Mrs. Joseph Lamberson, age thirty-nine, of Straughn, has produced an enigma which will require the skill of a master to unravel. Stant has taken for his bride his stepmother-in-law. His chief worry is to determine what he shall call his many complicated relatives.

Stant's former wife was a daughter of his present wife's husband, Joseph Lamberson, now dead. Joseph Lamberson's wife, now the wife of Stant, also had children by a former marriage before she was married to Lamberson. Children also were born to Joseph Lamberson and his wife, who is now the wife of Stant. This made three sets of children in the family. To all of these Stant is now related either directly or indirectly.

Before his recent marriage Stant was a stepson-in-law to his present wife, brother-in-law to Joseph Lamberson's children, stepbrother-in-law to his wife's children by her first marriage, half brother-in-law to the children of Joseph Lamberson and his wife, now Stant's wife. The children of Joseph Lamberson were uncles and aunts to Stant's children by his former marriage. His present wife was his children's stepgrandmother, his present wife's own children were stepuncles and aunts to his children, and the children of Joseph Lamberson and his wife, who is now Stant's wife, were half uncles and aunts to his children.

Now, since Stant has married Joseph Lamberson's widow, he becomes the husband of his stepmother-in-law. In addition to being a stepbrother-in-law to his former wife's brothers and sisters, he is now their stepfather, also he is stepfather and stepbrother-in-law to his present wife's children by her first marriage, and is stepfather and half brother-in-law to the children of Joseph Lamberson and his wife, now Stant's wife.

The children of Joseph Lamberson, already uncles and aunts, are now step half brothers and sisters to Stant's children. His present wife besides being stepgrandmother is now stepmother to his children and and his wife's own children by her first marriage are now both stepuncles and aunts and stepbrothers and sisters, and the children of Joseph Lamberson and his wife, who is now Stant's wife, are now half aunts and uncles and at the same time step half brothers and sisters. Stant is now stepgrandfather to his own children.

Good Samaritan Is in Jail for Aiding Woman

New York.—Ernest Lorraine, a photo-engraver, said recently at the West Forty-seventh street station, Manhattan, where he was locked up by Lieut. Patrick Fitzgibbons on a charge of disorderly conduct, that it did not pay to be a good Samaritan. He owed his arrest, he said, to a woman who stopped him on the street and asked him to deliver a note to Mrs. Victoria Muir, in her suite at the Hotel Manger.

Mrs. Muir came to New York recently from Europe to search for her husband, Peter Upton Muir, who, she charged, was spirited away from her. Mrs. Muir's companion, Marie Strutt, heard a knock at the suite door. When she called out, a male voice told her that it was the bellboy. Miss Strutt told him to go away, but he pushed a note under the door. The police would not reveal the note's contents, but it upset the two women.

In a few minutes telephone calls began to be made to the apartment. Mrs. Muir telephoned the police. She was instructed to invite the man telephoning up to the suite. When Lorraine knocked, the lieutenant placed him under arrest.

France Finds Bachelor Tax Law Not Effective

Paris.—Like Italy, France decided to increase the birth rate, which is slowly decreasing, by levying a bachelor tax. The present session of deputies may repeal the law.

The tax was started in 1920 when 5 per cent on their income was levied on unmarried men and spinsters over thirty years of age.

In 1924, more than 200,000 persons paid this tax, the following year, the figure, instead of decreasing, increased, so that in 1925, 228,000 paid, and in 1926, 258,000. Since then, the increase has been continuous.

The conclusion drawn from the figures is obvious the law has failed in its object.

Voltaire, famous French author of the Seventeenth century, was right, it seems, when he said that there would be more marriages and more children if taxation was reduced and life made less costly.

Spontaneous Farm Fires Baffle U. S. Scientist

Washington.—Spontaneous combustion continues to be the most baffling cause of farm fires, and only through exhaustive research will the cause be determined and means for prevention found, Dr. Henry G. Knight, chief of the bureau of chemistry and soils, department of Agriculture, declared recently. Loss of farm products from spontaneous combustion reaches an estimated total of $30,000,000 annually.

Fire Destroys Lone Cedar Inn

Fire that broke out about 2 o'clock this morning wrecked the part stone structure, known as Lone Cedar Inn, on the Ulster Park road, approximately a mile and a half outside of Port Ewen. The fire had such headway that efforts of the Port Ewen Fire Department to save the inn were futile. However, the firemen were able to save a barn nearby. Three wells in the vicinity were drained by the Port Ewen Fire Department's pumper in fighting the fire.

ITCHING ENDS WHEN ZEMO TOUCHES SKIN

—thousands say. It's wonderful the way soothing, cooling Zemo brings relief to skin which itches and burns. Even in most severe cases, itching disappears almost as soon as Zemo touches the tender and inflamed surface. To draw out local infection and help to clear away unsightly blemishes, we know of nothing better than invisible Zemo. Always keep this family antiseptic on hand. Use it freely. It's safe as can be. 35c, 60c and $1.00. All dealers.

Financial and Commercial

New York, Jan. 2 (AP).—The opening of the new year on the New York Stock Exchange today was greeted with a brisk rally. But it proved to be short lived as a renewal of pressure against the merchandising and public utility issues and high-priced specialties turned the prices downward around midday. Scores of early gains of one to nearly 6 points were cut down or wiped out, and many of them were converted into declines running from 2 to 6½ points.

A further sharp falling off in freight car traffic, appointment of equity receivers for the Submarine Boat Corporation, the passing of the American Cigar dividend and the revelation of large losses by investment trusts during the October-November break contributed to the bearish stock market sentiment.

The early rally was based on the belief that the completion of the heavy liquidation for tax loss purposes had strengthened the technical position of the market, which also was expected to benefit from the distribution of more than $1,000,000,000 in dividends and interest this month.

The early investment demand was disappointing, however, and pools, which had resumed activities in the expectation of attracting a large outside following, were compelled to curtail operations or run the risk of dissipating all of their buying power.

Commission houses continued to urge their customers to exercise careful discrimination in the making of new commitments.

Optimistic year-end statements by Secretaries Mellon and Lamont and a number of banking, business and railroad executives were not received with the same enthusiasm as in years past. Except for the rather general belief that security prices probably would be better in the last half of the year than the first half, few brokerage houses ventured any prophesies as to the trend of the market during the next few months.

Among the bearish factors stressed were: the loss of general buying power as a result of the recent crash in stock prices; the curtailment in freight traffic and general industrial production; the loss of gold; uncertainties over the tariff; prospects of congressional investigation of the federal reserve and securities speculation; increased unemployment; additional business casualties, and the forced liquidation of securities tied up as collateral for loans in banks.

Bullish factors set forth were: The strong position of the banks; the absence of any extensive inventories except in the automobile and a few smaller industries; the prospects of easier money and its stimulus to building and other construction; the administration's program to stimulate business; the relatively small volume of bank loans to corporations, and the presence of a large short interest in the market which is expected to act as a cushion on minor reactions.

Call money renewed at 6 per cent, with the demand light and indications that the rate would work lower within the next day or two. Short maturities in bankers' acceptances were cut ⅛ to one per cent. The Bank of England made no change in its discount rate.

General Electric rallied 5¾ points to 249¾ and then broke to 240; J. I. Case moved up 4¼ to 203 and dropped to 194½; Columbian Carbon advanced 3¾ to 179¾ and fell to 170 and United States Steel Common climbed 2¾ to 173¾ and tumbled to 168¾. Allied Chemical fell 6½ points below Tuesday's close. Standard Gas and Electric 5, and Sears Roebuck, R. H. Macy and Simmons 4 each.

Among the many issues to lose 2 points or more were American Telephone, American Can, Timken Roller Bearing and American and Foreign Power.

So-Called Middle Ages Imaginary, Says Writer

The Middle ages never existed. The journalistic John Addington Symonds and others to the contrary, modern historians of scientific temper know that the content which the phrase commonly holds for the popular mind is a myth, a phase and a provocative tool of that lingering superstition of the modern world—the superstition of Humanism.

When Flavio Biondo surveyed the world from 410 to 1410 and conveniently laid it out in a series of "decades," he was doing no more than to flatter the self-centering illusions of those of his contemporaries who were zealously devoted to the newly fashionable litterae humaniores.

Hence the picture of a vast expanse of time, as mental reckoning goes, extending from the wall of the Roman empire in the West in 476 to the fall of Constantinople in 1453, a dark and desolate waste peopled by the scholastic ghosts of thought, the intellect numbed and shivering. . . . Read a popularizer like Symonds, and you will get this latter picture: A world that has been blindfolded for centuries suddenly tearing the bandages from its eyes and awakening to the fact that life is life and filled with a spring-like joy.

It is a charmingly naive conception—charming, but naive. Unfortunately, the working out of human destinies in a corporate society is not quite so simple an affair as all that.—From "Rabelais: Man of the Renaissance," by Samuel Putnam.

OLD MAID'S DUAL LIFE

An old maid uses three lumps of sugar in her tea.

Openly she consigns all men to the devil.

Secretly she worships the ground the ice man walks on.

Openly she is thunderstruck at the idea of going without hose.

Secretly in her own room at night she struts around dressed like a water nymph.

Openly she abhors swearing.

Secretly she would damn a flea.

Openly she hates romance.

Secretly she wears out one movie star's picture a week.

Openly she is a pessimist.

Secretly she has great hope, is most optimistic.

Openly she is the laughing stock of the community.

THE DAIRY

CLOVER GRAZING IS PROFITABLE

Two Fields Are Needed for Continuous Feeding.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

On soils that contain lime the most productive grazing crop known today is sweet clover, according to the experts in forage crops in the United States Department of Agriculture. They point out that a good stand of second-season sweet clover can carry two head of cows per acre from early spring until mid-summer and cases are known where four head did not keep it down. Get the stock in early, they advise, when the clover is 6 inches high and put cattle enough on to keep it from blossoming; with only one cow to an acre the clover gets old too fast.

For continuous grazing, they point out, two fields of sweet clover are necessary, one that has just passed its first winter and one starting its first season's growth. Turn cattle on the older field in the spring and keep them there until July 15-30. By this time the sweet clover will bloom and get too woody to be palatable and the clover on the new field should be 6 to 8 inches high. The new clover will carry only about half the stock the old field carried, and allowance must be made for that by having double the acreage or by having other pasture. An excess acreage in the fall is not a bad thing, as any field not needed for grazing the next season can be turned under the next spring for corn with great benefit to the corn.

After grazing stops on the older field the clover will make considerable growth and th' can be plowed under in the fall with great benefit to any succeeding crop.

There is less danger from bloat with sweet clover than with other clovers, but cases have been known, and the usual precautions should be taken.

Mature Dairy Animals Are Needlessly Killed

A larger number of mature animals at the government dairy experiment farm, Beltsville, Md., have died from the effects of swallowing nails, wire, or similar material than from any other one cause, according to the bureau of dairy industry, United States Department of Agriculture. Autopsies made at this station showed that out of a total of 26 deaths over a period of years 12 were due to swallowing foreign objects, the most common of which was a sharp-pointed piece of wire two or three inches long. Such material collects in that part of the stomach known as the "honey comb" or reticulum. Some of the sharp-pointed objects may pass through the stomach wall and pierce the heart or other vital organ, with fatal results. Great care should, therefore, be exercised in handling and disposing of such materials as baling wire, nails, and rusted-out fencing.

Electric Current Used in Milking Any Herd

Five cents in the form of electricity will do a great many things. It has been figured out that a nickel's worth of electric current generated by a farm light plant will milk 10 cows, separate 1,400 pounds of milk, churn 20 pounds of butter, sharpen an axe or a scythe on the grindstone six times, pump a two-days' supply of water, run an electric sewing machine for five hours or do two large family washings.

According to the latest available information, nearly a million farms in the United States are electrified. While many of these farms have electric "high line" service, a large number are supplied by individual farm plants, particularly in communities where the "high lines" have not yet gone.

Maintain Fresh Water Supply for Dairy Cow

Plenty of pure, fresh water should be accessible to the dairy herd at all times. An average sized cow consumes from 50 to 100 pounds of water a day when dry. She will need four times this amount, or 200 to 400 pounds of water a day when in full flow of milk. Water supplies 87 per cent of the total content of milk and 56 per cent of the total body weight. Stagnant pools in the pasture should be filled or drained—dangerous intestinal parasites flourish around pond holes. Concrete water troughs, provided with drain pipes and floating valves, are practical.

Salt for Cows

The craving of dairy cattle for common salt is based upon a real need of the body. The dairy cow uses salt in proportion to the feed consumed; in other words, the high producer will need more than the low producer. The most common plan of supplying salt is to keep it before the animals at all times, either in the form of rock salt or ordinary stock salt. Other dairymen prefer to mix it with the grain usually at the rate of one pound per 100 pounds of grain mixture.

It is possible that in the course of time some endurance flyer will manage to stay up long enough to be declared legally dead.

Archeologists discover robberies of ancient tombs which make it clear that the troubles of the police are nothing new whatever.

Society Notes

A New Year's party was given at the home of John J. White, 136 Broadway, and a delightful time was had by all, games and dancing being enjoyed. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. N. Mogan, the Misses Julia and Margaret Hamilton, Anna Stenson, Alice and Loretta White, Harry Healey, Harold White, John White, Sr., John White, Jr., Leonard White, Walter McDonough and William White. All departed at an early hour wishing each other a happy New Year's.

A delightful social atmosphere reigned at the Sahler Sanitarium on Tuesday afternoon, when Mrs. Sahler, Miss Lockwood and Mrs. Wicker gave a charming New Year's Eve tea in honor of Dr. Maria Tretter-Vol, a graduate of the University of Vienna, and now, assistant to Dr. Crispell on the house staff. Dr. Vol has made many friends here who were very glad to meet her in this manner. Many of the sanitarium guests and a few of their personal Kingston friends gathered from 3 until 5, in the beautiful reception room, dedicated some time ago to such service. A small group of piano numbers was played by Miss Clara Aimee Gottschalk, pianist, of New York, there as guest during the holidays. After the music delicious refreshments were served, and over the teacups in the soft glow of Christmas candles, amid the beauty of fragrant flowers, the shadows of the past made way for a new year of bright promise.

On Wednesday evening, January 1, a family reunion was held at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Clerk in Ponckhockie. Among the guests were: Mr. and Mrs. James E. Clerk of New York city, Mr. and Mrs. John G. Clerk, of Chatham, N. J., Mrs. Margaret Wright, son and daughter, of Orange, N. J., Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Wilkes, of Newark, N. J., Mr. and Mrs. Walter Clerk and sons of Stamford, Conn., Mrs. Addison Kaufmann and daughter, of New York city, Mrs. Leanora James and two sons, of Philadelphia, who were relatives of Mr. and Mrs. Clerk, Mrs. Helen Smith, of Kingston, Dr. Clarence Clark, of Kingston, Mrs. Victor Lomothe, of Corona, L. I., Mrs. Ellington, of Stamford, Conn., Van R. Crispell, of Brodhead, N. Y., Mr. and Mrs. John L. Sampson and family, of Kingston, Messrs. Oscar and Raymond Crispell, of Kingston. There were games, music and later in the evening delicious refreshments were served. All agreed that it was a delightful way to start the new year.

TWO DEATHS AND $8600,000 DAMAGE IN JERSEY FIRES.

Newark, N. J., Jan. 2 (AP).—Three disastrous fires in New Jersey yesterday took the lives of an aged couple and caused damage of more than $600,000. A number of firemen were injured.

Locked in close embrace, the bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Kirby were taken by firemen from the charred ruins of their home in North Hackensack. Kirby, after placing his two small grandsons on the roof of a porch, stumbled back into the flame-swept dwelling to rescue his wife. They died together as he attempted to carry her out.

The other fires were in Jersey City, where a sash and door factory was destroyed, and in Atlantic City, where a six-story brick apartment structure was burned. Two firemen were slightly injured and two were overcome by smoke in Jersey City, where the loss was estimated at $300,000. Thirty-two persons were led or carried from the apartment house in Atlantic City. The loss there was more than $300,000.

Longer Life Possible

In sad and loving memory of my dear wife and our loving mother, Lillian R. Rosa, who died two years ago today, January 2, 1928.

Till God called her home to suffer no more.

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

(By The Associated Press)

New York—Primo Carnera, Italian fighter, who has been lugging his 6 feet 9 and 274 pounds around town seeing the sights, has a poor appetite. All he had for New Year's breakfast was two glasses of orange juice, four eggs, half a dozen slices of toast and two quarts of milk.

Ottawa—General Jan Christian Smuts has refrained from tobacco for 30 years. Offered a cigar at the home of Sir Robert Borden, he said he had not smoked since the British made tobacco so hard to get during the Boer war.

New York—A doll's house eight feet long and five feet high, presented to Kathryne Ray, 5, daughter of the Rev. Dr. Randolph Ray, rector of the Little Church Around The Corner, is complete in furnishings even to vacuum cleaners and a wine cellar. It is a miniature of a 14-room London mansion to the last detail including iceboxes and cocktail shakers.

Sea Cliff, N. Y.—William P. Draper, who began his 91st year of life with 1930, says he has drunk no water for 40 years, because it rusts pipes. He uses tea, coffee and other beverages.

Vancouver, Wash.—Half of the milk from Godfrey Hinkalman's cow must be delivered to his divorced wife. The decree, stipulating he must divide his goods with her, specifically mentions the milk.

Reno—There has been a slump in divorces. Decrees awarded last year were 2,071 compared with 2,102 in 1928.

Washington—Captain Taylor Branson, leader of the Marine Band, has been at every White House New Year's reception for 32 years. The band yesterday played 80 numbers in four hours without pause. It was divided into two sections, playing alternately.

Washington—There's a haven for wild duck near the Washington monument. Driven by hunters' guns from the Potomac marshes, where they like to eat wild celery, they are flocking to the tidal basin lured by food scattered there by order of Colonel U. S. Grand, 3rd.

How Elephants Drink

An elephant's trunk is a weapon of offense and defense. The elephant drinks by means of his trunk by sucking up a quantity of water sufficient to fill it and then discharging the contents into the mouth. The stomach, which is of a very lengthened and narrow form, has near the gullet a reservoir for water capable of containing several gallons, while a peculiar muscle connecting the windpipe and gullet enables the animal to regurgitate the fluid, which may then be sucked from the mouth into the trunk and squirted over the body or at some offending man or animal.

How Wind Is Measured

The velocity of wind is measured by an instrument called an anemometer. It consists of three or four hollow hemispheres on the ends of equal rods at right angles to each other and designed to rotate in a horizontal plane about the point of intersection of the rods. The instrument may be seen turning in the wind at any weather bureau station.

Soy Beans Now Important Crop

Thrives on Soils Too Acid for Sweet or Red Clover or Alfalfa.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In the last few years soy beans have become important as a hay and seed crop in the eastern half of the United States. As the acreage increased and new uses were found for the crop, the machinery for harvesting the seed has been developed to high efficiency. In the principal grain producing sections the grain binder, the self-rake reaper, and the combine are now used for harvesting the seed. In a publication just issued by the United States Department of Agriculture, Farmers' Bulletin 1605-F, "Soy Bean Hay and Seed Production," the story of the rapid rise of the soy bean to its present place in American agriculture is traced, and suggestions are made as to the use of the crop.

Harvesting Crop.

Soy bean hay should be thoroughly cured before being stacked, housed, or baled, as there is danger of molding when it is stored or baled too green or too soon after a rain. Soy bean hay is but little more difficult to cure than hay from other legumes, and may be handled successfully by about the same methods. The crop is at its best for hay when the seeds are about half-developed.

The crop will do well on many soils. It will grow well on soils too acid for red clover, sweet clover, or alfalfa. It is excellent as a summer catch crop following early crops, or for fields not in the regular rotation.

Cutting for Hay.

The publication discusses the time and methods of cutting for hay and gives the best methods of curing the hay; and as to the seed, it discusses time of harvesting, method of harvesting, threshing, and storage.

Tentative United States standards have been prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture for use in the marketing of soy bean and soy bean mixed hay, and standards have been prepared for grading the beans.

Soy beans which are to be stored as seed should be thoroughly dry when thrashed. After thrashing, the beans should be watched carefully to avoid heating and molding. Heating is especially likely to occur if the seed is bulked in large quantities in a bin or in a poorly ventilated room. Soy beans are seldom attacked by weevils or the other insects which attack most other beans and peas.

The bulletin may be obtained free from the office of information, Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., as long as the supply available for free distribution lasts.

Important Pointers on Pruning Young Trees

The growth and fruiting habits of the cherry and plum lend themselves readily to the same general principles of pruning as are practiced in the case of apples and pears. On account of their smaller size and habit of growth the open head system of training and pruning is usually found best. With these fruits, the most important point is the establishment of the proper frame work or scaffold branches in the young trees. Pruning after the trees come into bearing should be light and consist mainly of thinning out thick clusters to admit the proper amount of sunlight needed for the development of well colored fruit.

Improvement Societies Found in Many States

Crop improvement associations now operating in thirty states and a number of Canadian provinces, serving as a connecting link between experiment stations and individual farmers, have done much to help farmers reap the benefits of experiment station work. For example, an improved variety of oats developed by the Kansas station, and known as Kanota, yielding from five to ten bushels per acre more than commonly grown varieties, is now the leading variety of oats grown in that state. Seed of this variety was first distributed by the station to a few farmers in 1921.

San Jose Scale

Practically all orchard fruits are attacked by the San Jose scale and many of the ornamental trees and shrubs are also attacked. As far as the fruit trees are concerned, the San Jose scale attacks the trunks, limbs, foliage and fruit. On the older parts of the tree, especially in case of a severe infestation, the appearance is that of an ashy gray color.

When the hand is rubbed briskly over the scales, a greasy appearance is a result of the crushing of the insects underneath the scales.

Pet Mad Dog

Margery was describing her pet dog to her father's friend.

"Is your dog a bull dog?" inquired the interested man.

"No, he is a mud dog and barks at everybody that comes to our house," replied the four-year-old miss.

OUT OF THE RUT

(© by D. J. Walsh.)

WHENEVER there was a party or a new show in town Edith Flaxman knew as a matter of course that Loring Black would ask her to go. Sometimes he even omitted the formality of asking, merely remarking that he'd be around for her at a certain time.

She was thirty years old and since they had been in high school Loring Black always had been her escort. Living so near he was in and out of the house constantly. When they were younger, people had smiled in kindly fashion at their devotion and expected a wedding in a short time, but the expectation had died as the years went on. The rest of their little crowd married and set up their households. Envying the girls she knew were busy with their new furniture and curtains, Edith would have died rather than to admit to any of them that in all this time Loring never once had spoken of marriage. She felt humiliated and at fault.

He cared for her she was certain and he took her affection for granted. It was a rut in which they traveled, always on the same line, getting nowhere. Deep in her heart for a long time now had been growing fear that nothing ever would change the situation. Popular, handsome, adored by his mother and two sisters, Loring was far too comfortable to feel the urge to change and establish his own home. Life was too kind to him. In fact, she was too kind to him. But determine as she might she never was quite able to carry through any plan to break the shackles of habit, to make other friends among the men, to establish her right to win her own place in life. She had been a pretty girl and was now too handsome a woman to remain unnoticed but, though she fought the fact, no one in her eyes ever measured up to Loring Black, selfish though he might be.

The summer in which she had gone to Europe, bidding him good-by with a heavy heart and smiling lips, resolved to break away from the chains which held her, Loring had gone down to New York to see her off, had filled her cabin with fruit and books and flowers and had held both of her hands at the gangplank.

"Hurry home, Edith," he had begged her. "This is a terrible idea of yours, this trip! Don't know how I'm going to stand your being away!"

They had looked at each other a trifle breathlessly amid the jostling crowd and then the gong had sounded and he had left her. And that hope died out. All summer she had thought of the time when she should go home and when she did return his unaffected joy at seeing her had swept away all her stern resolutions. Loring was Loring and she would take what was given her thankfully, though she hated herself for what she felt was lack of spirit.

"Loring is never going to marry," his mother was in the habit of saying. "He is too devoted to his sisters and myself. Why should he marry when he has a home like this—run with no trouble and care to himself?" She said it before him, anxiously when he was younger, proudly as he grew older. She had feared at first that Edith Flaxman would have won him away.

Even Loring himself could not have told how he had placidly accepted things as they were with no great desire to change them. When the right time came, he told himself, Edith and he would marry. There was no need of speech, they understood each other. All this time, he insisted to himself when his inner self reproached him, she had been free, he had not tied her down to waiting. Yet if she had not waited he knew he could not have endured it.

Edith's married sister was at times outspoken. "You are a fool to let Loring Black monopolize you all this time," she told Edith. "He has no right to cut you off from the rest of the world and do nothing more. He loves you and doesn't know it. It is up to you to bring things to a head. Either marry him or send him away. Or do you expect a miracle to happen?"

Flushed and miserable, Edith had flared out at her and silenced her. Bitterly she told herself that no miracle would happen, nothing would ever change things as they had grown to be. She and Loring would grow old and gray in this lifeless companionship. At times she looked unhappy and there were lines on her face.

And then Loring Black, hectored by an insistent pain in his side, went to the consulting room of a noted physician, was received by an associated doctor who after an examination and questioning told him to return the next day for the great doctor's advice after he had studied the chart the assistant was even then making out. He was not to worry.

Blithely twenty-four hours later Loring Black ran up the same steps and was ushered into the inner office. He sat there, handsome, confident and at ease and Doctor Morehead, regarding him, felt the recurrent pang of sorrow that dogged his life work.

"Black," he said after some few words, "I'm going to give it to you straight from the shoulder. It seems impossible, I know—but you've got about six months. There's nothing to be done. Brace up."

It was a gray and misty day and in the mist and fog Loring Black walked for miles out of the town along the river road. It was a favorite walk in summer of himself and Edith. At the thought of Edith he staggered against a tree and clutching it laid his hot cheek against the rough oak bark. As a lightning flash reveals the entire landscape down to its smallest details this sword which had slashed his inmost soul revealed blindingly all the long years since Edith and he had been in school, the years during which she had waited and he had let her wait. All that he had missed!

Gray faced, hours later, he went up the walk to his home. There were bright lights in every window, and as his hand touched the doorknob the door flew open.

"Loring!" cried his mother. "Where have you been? We have been so worried—how tired you look! When you've had some dinner you had better call up a Doctor Morehead, who has been telephoning here every half hour since the middle of the afternoon—who is he, Loring?"

Feverishly at the phone Loring Black hesitated and then gave the number. There was nothing more that Morehead could tell him that mattered now. Why couldn't he let him alone in his misery?

"Black," came the doctor's crisp tones at the other end of the wire. "I don't know what to say, how to square myself. You must have been going through tortures! That fool assistant of mine had mixed the charts—and I gave you the fate of another man, poor chap! All that ails you is crossed ribs and a slight adhesion—"

For the only time in all his strong life Loring Black fainted.

"Let me alone," he told his mother and hovering sisters when he came to. "I don't want any dinner. I haven't got time. I don't want to rest! I've got to go and see Edith at once!"

He was not conscious of walking the few rods to Edith's front gate, but presently he found himself in the room with her and they were alone and his arms were around her. He held her as though he would never let her go.

"If you can ever forgive me for being a blind and selfish idiot," he begged, "tell me you'll marry me, Edith! Next week—tomorrow! We've wasted so much time. Let's drive to the county seat tomorrow and be off on our honeymoon! Right away!"

Looking into his ardent eyes, Edith Flaxman knew that the miracle had in some way happened and was not inclined to question fate. He did love her and that was all that mattered.

"I'll do it, Loring," she told him.

Books "Balanced" After Forty Strenuous Years

French authors who had known the elder Dumas, author of "The Three Musketeers" and "The Count of Monte Cristo," personally, told me this moving story.

When Dumas came to Paris he was very poor; his entire fortune consisted of a 20-franc gold piece. But soon he rose to world fame, made immense sums of money and lived like a king. He spent money profusely, he played the stock market and won and lost hundreds of thousands from one day to another.

But after forty years of luxury, he became a poor man once more. When he was lying on his deathbed a friend of his visited him. The dying man lay on a simple iron cot in a modest, poverty-stricken little room. The doctor had just left him, and Dumas showed his guest the prescription the doctor had written for him.

"I shall have to take this medicine right away," the sick man said in a weak voice.

The friend took the prescription and started to take it down to the pharmacist.

"Wait a second," Dumas said. "You'll need money, too; medicine costs money, like everything else in the world!"

And he opened the drawer of his night cabinet.

"I think I still have enough money for medicine."

After a long search, he did find one single 20-franc gold piece in the drawer. That constituted his entire fortune. He gave it to his friend with a sad smile playing on his lips:

"Forty years ago I arrived in Paris with 20 francs. What a lucky man I am! Look how much I have played the market! And, as you see, I haven't lost anything in forty years!"—Pere. Molnar in Vanity Fair.

Fallacy

Mayor Mackey, of Philadelphia, a university man himself, believes that every boy who wishes it should receive a college education.

"I hope," said the mayor in an interview, "to do something for ambitious youth in my administration. I am a great believer in the benefits of education and I disagree totally with the illiterate millionaire who once said to me:

"'These here fellers with a mint of knowledge can never coin it into good hard cash.'"

Most Important Thing

Three passengers in a big sports car were having a lively argument as to whether they would beat a train at a level crossing.

"Don't get excited," cried the driver, "I can do it easily."

"And I say you can't!" yelled the man at the side of the driver. "The train's going a lot faster than we are."

"Well," said the passenger in the rear seat, "I don't care who wins this race, so long as it's not a dead heat.—Weekly Scotsman.

We may be unfair to the inventor of the pullman car window, but often wonder whether he didn't also have something to do with the hotel door transom.

Pullman porters have resolved again that accepting a tip is an unbearable affront. We assume it must be something well over a dollar to be rated a gross insult.

We worry less over the younger generation, having just learned that one of the largest manufacturers of rouge has been in uninterrupted business for 150 years.

Sport Slants

By Alan J. Gould
(Associated Press Sports Editor.)

The gross athletic receipts from all sources exceeded $1,000,000 at three eastern colleges in 1929—Harvard, Yale and Pennsylvania.

If they were not quite up to that mark, the figures at Michigan in the middle west and at California, Stanford and Southern California on the Pacific coast were fairly close to the million-dollar level.

Football receipts contributed more than three-fourths of the athletic income in each and every case and the ends of commercial enterprise, despite the Carnegie report, are not in sight.

Pennsylvania within the past two years has substantially increased the capacity of its big stadium, Franklin field, and built a magnificent indoor Palestra. Harvard this year enlarged its stadium on a permanent basis, besides installing a covered, lighted press box that brought three rousing cheers from the wandering correspondents.

Yale's complete athletic plant, made possible by huge profits from football in the bowl, is one of the best in the east, if not in the entire country.

Southern California alone of these major colleges has no exclusive stadium of its own but the Los Angeles coliseum, set in Exposition Park adjoining the university, provides an ideal battleground at a reasonable cost.

Baseballs, especially home runs, may be as decisive as any factor in modern big league baseball but the National League averages for 1929 reveal conclusively that something besides the big punch is needed to win pennants or even get into the first division.

The Phillies led the circuit in hitting last season with the remarkable average of .309, seven points better than either Pittsburgh or Chicago, but the Phils finished no better than fifth. Their pitching staff, or rather the lack of it, was the answer to where Burt Shotton's men finished.

The Phils pounded out 153 home runs, as compared with 140 for the clouting Cubs. This mark was only five short of the major league record of 158, set by the Yankees in 1927.

Of the handful of players who missed not a single National League game last season, three of them were Don Hurst, Art Whitney and Lefty O'Doul, all big guns in the Phillie attack and the latter batting champion of the league.

If old Grover Alexander can find a few more winning games in his aged arm and if another pitching find or two can be added to the staff for next season, the Phillies will give most any club an argument, if not a knockout wallop.

So great has been the golf rush for the $25,000 Agua Caliente Open the middle of January that the officials in charge of the Mexican resort's big money tournament have limited the field to 90 players. This makes it more exclusive than the National Open which is limited to around 150 performers.

Leo Diegel, the club pro, heads the list of eligibles, who will comprise the 32 qualifiers in the recent P. G. A. championship, the first 30 and ties in the last National Open and the leaders in the $10,000 Los Angeles Open.

Redeemers Rule In S. S. League

The Redeemers took the first half of the Senior Sunday School League when they defeated the Congregationals Wednesday night on the Y court, 27 to 22. This was a postponed league game and its results meant plenty to either team. However, the Redeemers held the lead by one or two points throughout the game and when the final whistle blew were still in front. The score:

ALL-STAR EAST DEFEATS ALL-STAR WEST 19 TO 7

San Francisco, Jan. 2 (AP).—Western football enthusiasts were singing the praises of Jack Cannon, Notre Dame guard, Glassgow, Iowa halfback, and a host of other eastern performers today as they recuperated from the effects of seeing an all-star West team trounced 19 to 7 here yesterday by an all-star East team.

The decisiveness of the triumph left spectators at the contest bewildered. The East scored its first touchdown in the opening quarter on a 25-yard pass, added another in the second, and completed its scoring with two field goals by Frosty Peters, of Illinois.

The West made its lone score in the third quarter when Sloan, of Nebraska, crashed through for a touchdown after a march down the field.

California's Aerial Game Too Much For Pittsburgh

Beaten 47 to 14, Panthers Suffer Worst Defeat Ever Administered In a Tournament of Roses Competition.

Pasadena, Cal., Jan. 2 (AP).—Burdened with a decisive 47 to 14 trouncing handed them as a New Year's day greeting by the mighty Trojans of the University of Southern California, Pittsburgh's grid squad today prepared to return to its native heath. It was the most decisive defeat meted out in the fourteen years of Tournament of Roses competition and the Golden Pitt Panthers left the Greensward bowed in their first defeat of the season because they could not solve the puzzling Southern California passing attack.

Beginning with the initial touchdown, which came only a few minutes after 70,000 persons had filled the stadium, the men of Troy found scoring possible in four of their seven tallies because of unerring aerial work. A fifth counter was indirectly due to a long pass and the others were result of plunging, driving football.

Toby Uansa, one of the four all-American selections on the Panthers opened the conflict with a dazzling 68-yard end run after the opening kickoff, but fleet Russell Saunders, U. S. C. safety man, cut him down from behind, 18 yards short of the goal.

Then, when the Panthers had failed to crack the Trojan line for the necessary yardage, the touchdown parade for the Pacific coast representatives started. Saunders' pass to Harry Edelson caught the Pitt secondary defense flatfooted and the Troy halfback scored.

Before the first quarter had ended Saunders repeated, this time placing a long toss within reach of the racing Ernie Pinckert, Edelson's mate at right half, and U. S. C. scored again.

Satisfied with their aerial thrusts, the Trojans reverted to straight football, with Marshall Duffield skirting the Panther end for a touchdown after a Pitt fumble had been recovered on the 18-yard line. Again, before the half ended, point earning was marked by Duffield, after his pass to Jess Mortensen had placed the ball within the shadows of their opponents' goal.

Trailing 26 to 0 as they went into the second half, the Panthers mustered a rally, going to the air for a pair of touchdowns.

Uansa's pass to Bill Walinchus and Harold Williams' flip to Paul Collins, two of four tosses in 19 attempts were responsible for the eastern eleven's points. These came in the third and fourth periods.

Healed His Rupture

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. I had decided my only hope of recovery was an operation. Everything I tried did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely healed my rupture. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I will give full information about how you may find a complete recovery without operation if you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 778—22 Marcellus Ave., Manasquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of the rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.
